SCHOOL OF SCIENCE DEAN NAMED

The I.U. board of trustees approved appointment of Dr. Marshall C. Yovits, professor of computer and information science and professor of electrical engineering at Ohio State University, as dean of the Purdue University School of Science at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis, at its September 8 meeting.

The action, taken concurrently with similar approval by trustees of Purdue University, is effective January 1, 1980.

"Excellence in the School of Science is a matter of major importance at IUPUI, both for the sake of our students and for our community," said Dr. Glenn W. Irwin, Jr., I.U. vice president for Indianapolis.

"I am confident that the high quality teaching and research programs which the school has developed will be enhanced as Dean Yovits and the faculty refine the curriculum and explore further research areas. I have no doubt that with Dr. Yovits' leadership business and industry soon will regard the School of Science as one of the most valuable resources in Central Indiana," he said.

At Ohio State University, Yovits established, developed and guided the Department of Computer and Information Science. Until September, 1978, he was also chairman of the department and director of the Computer and Information Science Research Center. He has been active in teaching and research in areas of information systems and computer applications. Yovits' current research, supported by the National Science Foundation, is concerned with development of a general theory of information flow and analysis and the effect of information on decision making.

Before joining OSU in 1966, Yovits was with the Office of Naval Research for 10 years where he established and headed the Information Systems Branch and also served as director of the Naval Analysis Group.

Yovits was awarded B.S. and M.S. degrees in physics by Union College at Schenectady, N.Y. At Yale University he earned an M.S. and a Ph.D. degree in physics.

In other personnel actions affecting the Indianapolis campus, the trustees approved the appointment of Rozella May Schlotfeldt as professor of nursing and interim executive director of the Midwest Alliance in Nursing (MAIN). Headquartered at the I.U. School of Nursing in Indianapolis, MAIN hopes to promote a rational system of higher education in nursing, improve nursing practices and advance nursing research in a 13-state area.

Carol Nathan was named assistant dean of the faculties at IUPUI. She also holds positions as associate professor and director of occupational therapy in the Division of Allied Health Sciences of the School of Medicine.

The board also approved the appointment of Carl Dortch as adjunct professor in the School of Business and in the School of Public and Environmental Affairs. Dortch is a special assistant to Dr. Irwin, a post he accepted after his recent retirement as president of the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce.

Permission to proceed with preliminary planning for two new intensive care units in Indiana University Hospital was approved.

The two units -- for cardiac and surgical intensive care patients -- will replace the five existing areas in the hospital where such care is delivered.

Estimated project cost is $4,729,420. Financing for the projects would come from hospital revenues.

The proposed increase (18) in the number of intensive care beds will enable the hospital to meet the needs of an increasing volume of critically ill referral patients.

Construction is beginning this month on the Michigan Street East Garage. The Wilhelm Construction Co. of Indianapolis submitted the lowest of five bids for the project and the bid of $2,767,840 was approved by the trustees.

When completed by the fall of 1980, the mound-type parking facility will have a capacity for 463 vehicles.

In other action, the board approved the purchase of some $95,000-worth of equipment for the Toxicology Department, equipment to help replace what was destroyed April 25 in an arson fire.

The trustees also approved the awarding of a contract for a relay tower at Franklin College to allow the signal from the Indiana Higher Education Telecommunications System to be received at the IUPUI Columbus Center and the Columbus Cablevision System. The instructional television fixed service tower at Franklin College is an important element in the development of the IHETS state-wide closed circuit TV network, according to Dr. Jane Richards, executive director of IHETS.

CIRCLE CITY CIRCUIT RETURNS

Students have scheduled September 29 through October 6 for the fall edition of their annual festival, Circle City Circuit (CCC).

The festival, formerly held in the spring, presents a variety of activities to support the Circle City Circuit Scholarship Fund. IUPUI students, members of the faculty and staff, and persons from the community may participate.

An "Almost Anything Goes" contest and a noon cookout September 29 at the Union Building will kick off the week-long festivities. The tennis tournament finals are scheduled for October 2 at 3 p.m. at the Indianapolis Sports Center, 725 West New York Street. The October 3 agenda includes an ice cream social and a flea market at the Union Building. The volleyball tournament champions also will be determined October 3 at 6 p.m. at the School of Physical Education, 1010 West 64th Street.

Displays, exhibits, and demonstrations of special interest to women will be featured during the Warm Weather Women's Festival (WWWF) October 4 at Cavanaugh Mall, 925 West Michigan Street. Also provided in the 'festival within a festival' are a noon cookout and concert.

A shotgun start will begin the annual Circle City Circuit golf outing October 5. Golfers will meet at 1 p.m. at the Eagle Creek Golf Course for the 18-hole scramble event.

The highlight of the entire new fall edition of the CCC festival is the canoe race. The IUPUI School of Physical Education, 1010 West 64th Street, will be the new location of the annual CCC event in which students, faculty, staff, and members of the community compete. Area businesses and organizations sponsor canoe race teams to generate money for the scholarship fund.

For further information, contact the Student Activities Office, Cavanaugh Hall, Room 322, 925 West Michigan Street, Indianapolis, 46202 or call 264-3931.
