The Dean's Message

One School. Endless Possibilities. If you've seen any of Kelley's most recent marketing materials, you may remember noting this phrase. Although this tagline appears in our literature, it's more than just a convenient, catchy slogan. At Kelley, we strive to provide our students with the high-quality business education that ensures endless possibilities for the future. Our endeavors to offer students such an experience is evidenced in a number of accomplishments achieved in 2005-2006. Among them are the following:

- For the first time, Kelley graduated more students than any other school on the IUPUI campus. In addition, our Evening MBA program remained near capacity, and enrollment for the undergraduate program held steady.
- We launched a senior "professional core" for undergraduates consisting of a new business strategy course and two new half-semester courses dealing with ethics and leadership and human resources and negotiation.
- The school approved a revised Business Foundations Certificate targeting IUPUI students who are neither business majors nor business minors.
- In partnership with the Greater Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce, Kelley founded a new program called the Main Street Initiative. With the goal of helping the region's small- and medium-sized businesses grow, Kelley faculty will focus on key business issues for these companies, providing insight and analysis based on cutting-edge research. Among the program's offerings, we're conducting educational seminars and workshops for interested companies.

These are just a sample of the highlights of our year here at Kelley. I encourage you to spend a few moments browsing through the pages of this online annual report to learn more about the work we're doing at Kelley to maintain and enhance the business education for which our school has become known.

Women's Alumni Advisory Board

Supporting the Kelley School of Business Indianapolis MBA program, the MBA Women's Alumni Advisory Board aims to maximize the potential for women in the program and, ultimately, in the business community. The board's priorities include:

- Increasing the number of qualified women entering the program and the quality of their credentials;
- Increasing the value of the MBA experience for women enrolled in the program; and
- Creating a strong, ever-growing network of MBA graduates to support each other and raise visibility of the program in the community.

Collaborations

Collaboration is an important theme for the Kelley School of Business Indianapolis. The school works diligently to create and maintain worthwhile collaborations with other schools at IUPUI, the business community and others. Following is some information about one of Kelley's high-profile collaborations, the Randall L. Tobias Center on Leadership Excellence.

Tobias Center for Leadership Excellence

A university-wide entity, the Tobias Center is a collaborative undertaking focused on cross-sector leadership in the corporate, public service, education and non-profit communities. The center's enduring mission is to inspire leadership excellence on a national scale. Programming generates and supports the understanding of leadership and shares that understanding through practical application.

The center is housed at Kelley Indianapolis and includes Kelley faculty from both Bloomington and Indianapolis, faculty members from the IU School of Public and Environmental Affairs (SPEA), the IU School of Education and The Center on Philanthropy at Indiana University.

An overview of the center's accomplishments in its first year includes:

- Board of Overseers – At its second meeting in June 2006, the board received reports on the Center's first full year of programming. The meeting resulted in some valuable insights, providing direction and feedback on some of the Center's activities. An internal listserv was established so that the board can maintain regular communication with the Center's faculty and staff.
- Faculty Fellows – The Tobias Center currently has 23 Faculty Fellows. These representatives are drawn from Kelley, the School of Public and Environmental Affairs, the School of Education, the Center on Philanthropy, the School of Liberal Arts, the Department of Military Science and the School of Medicine.
- Tobias Conference – The inaugural Tobias Lecture was delivered by Representative Lee Hamilton in April 2006.
- Semler Lecture – A new initiative funded by AUL/OneAmerica and presented by the Tobias Center, the Semler Lecture includes an annual lecture on community leadership as demonstrated by the life and career of Jerry Semler, Chairman of OneAmerica. Cardinal Theodore E. McCarrick, former Archbishop of Washington, DC, delivered the first Semler Lecture in fall 2006.
- Hazelett Forum – The inaugural Hazelett Forum took place in April 2006. Cheryl Bachelder, former president and chief concept officer of KFC Corporation and a member of the Tobias Center's board of overseers, delivered the lecture and spent the day with several groups of IUPUI students and faculty. This forum was held in memory of Susie Hazelett, former executive director of the Tobias Foundation, who also served as a consultant for the Tobias Center during its launch.
- Tobias Center Multi-Sector Forum on Leadership – Convened in April 2006, the inaugural Tobias Center Multi-Sector Forum brought together both practitioners and scholars to participate in lectures, panel discussions and group discussions on the field of leadership. The focus of this year's forum was Ethical Leadership.
- Leadership Laboratory – The Leadership Laboratory is successfully underway with the selection of Dr. Philip Scarpino, an oral history expert from the Indiana University School of Liberal Arts, as director of the Oral History Project. The project includes interviews with John Mutz, former lieutenant governor of Indiana; former Vice President Dan Quayle; Ambassador Randall L. Tobias; and Jim Morris, current leader of the United Nations' Food Program.

- Hoosier Fellows – Launched in January 2006, the inaugural Hoosier Fellows program includes 12 representatives from business, education, religion, government and other non-profit organizations. This program represents the Tobias Center's commitment to provide leadership study opportunities to the state.

Careers and Placement

- This is the Career Placement Office's (CPO) fifth year working with students and employers.
- Several central Indiana employers assisted Kelley Indianapolis students with their interviewing skills through the CPO's mock interview program. Fifty-five students participated in the mock interview event.
- Approximately 350 students and 110 employers attended the CPO's "Meet the Recruiter" events. Designed in a job-fair format, this event encourages students and employers to meet and greet each other and exchange information, including resumes and business cards.
- In April, the CPO conducted "A Guide to Recruiting International Students: An Employer Forum focused on connecting Indiana businesses with an untapped pool of talented and diverse professionals" workshop for employers.
- On-campus recruiting resulted in 592 full-time jobs posted and 357 internships posted. Seventy companies were involved in on-campus recruiting with 934 jobs posted.
- On-campus interviews were held for 49 internship positions.
