Message from the Dean

One of the best days of my career was when I moved into the dean's office at Inlow Hall last summer. For 13 years, the McKinney School of Law has been my home, and I have developed warm relationships with more students, alumni, colleagues, and friends than I can count. It is exciting to know that, as Dean, I will be able to renew those connections and build even more bridges to our school. I also am excited to be writing this, my first Dean's Message, in our alumni magazine, The McKinney Lawyer.

By now, you have seen the magazine's cover, and may have gleaned that I am a baseball fan. Throwing out a first pitch last summer, in the company of my own family and my extended law school family, was a special moment. It also made me reflect on lessons I have learned on ball fields over the years, especially while serving local organizations that provide athletics-related outlets for young people. When done right, sports teaches life skills: teamwork, individual responsibility, perseverance, and leadership. In many ways, these skills are not all that different than what we try to instill in students at the law school. In fact, our own mission statement sets a goal of preparing our graduates to be "excellent, ethical professionals and leaders," who will provide "service to society at a local, state, national, and international level."

These are lofty ambitions to be sure. But, in my view, there is not a law school in the country better positioned to achieve them. As most of you know, our school has a long tradition of approaching education in a way that trains not just good legal technicians, but true counselors in the best sense of the word. In part, this is due to excellent stewardship by those who have preceded me in the dean's office. We also are blessed with a faculty that is passionate about mentoring a new generation of lawyers and leaders. Perhaps most important, we are supported by incredibly loyal alumni and friends throughout the state—indeed all around the nation and world.

Today, our hallways are filled with tomorrow's leaders—the people who soon will be representing you in government, sitting on the bench as you try cases, serving as your partners in practice and protecting your personal, business, and family interests. We all have a large stake in the quality of education and the quality of the people at the McKinney School of Law. And I could not be more proud to be working with all of you to continue our tradition of excellence.

I hope you enjoy reading this issue of our alumni magazine and dean's report. We feature a story about alumni who have pursued alternative career paths, focusing on those who have found success in real estate. The dean's report also recognizes our donors, and I want to thank all of you who have contributed financially to the law school. Your continued support is critical to our success and we are grateful to have you on our team.

News Briefs

Rogers, '96, Appointed IU Foundation Vice President

The Indiana University Foundation has appointed Joyce Q. Rogers, '96, as vice president for development and external relations for Diversity, Equity, and Multicultural Affairs (DEMA) and senior advisor for strategic development initiatives. The newly created position is charged with increasing the presence and significance of the university among prospective and current minority students, alumni, business and community leaders, and donors.

Most recently, Rogers was vice president for development for Ivy Tech Community College, where she was responsible for day-to-day operations for development. Rogers came to Ivy Tech from the Indiana Black Expo, Inc. (IBE), where she served as president and CEO. In this role, she managed the organization's youth and family programs and more than 50 events annually. Before joining IBE, Rogers was director of contract management for the Indiana Family and Social Services Administration.

Rogers is a member of the American, Indiana, Marion County and Indianapolis Bar Associations and has served on numerous boards and committees including the Mind Trust, WFYI, Dress for Success, Brebeuf Jesuit Board of Trustees, the Ivy Tech Community College Regional Board for Indianapolis, Stanley K. Lacey Leadership Association, Family Support Board, United Way, Indiana Fever Advisory Board, and the Women's Collaborative of Central Indiana.

Mihalik, '95, Named Indiana Securities Commissioner

Carol Mihalik, '95, has been named Indiana Securities Commissioner by Indiana Secretary of State Connie Lawson. Mihalik had previously served as general counsel in the Secretary of State's office.

Mihalik takes the place of Chris Naylor, '98, who resigned in October to become assistant executive director of the Indiana Prosecuting Attorneys Council. In her new position, Mihalik will lead the Secretary of State's efforts to regulate state securities.

Mihalik joined the Secretary of State's office in 2009 as associate general counsel, primarily focused on complex securities litigation. Mihalik also served under two commissioners at the Indiana Department of Insurance and worked in the office of the Indiana Attorney General.

Outreach Clinic Wins Governor's Award for Service Learning

The IU Student Outreach Clinic received the Governor's Service Award for Exemplary Service Learning on October 3. The award is sponsored by the Indiana Office of Faith-Based and Community Initiatives and Indiana Commission on Community Service and Volunteerism, and the award ceremony is part of the annual Governor's Conference on Service and Nonprofit Capacity Building.

The IU Student Outreach Clinic was recognized for outstanding service learning. The clinic is a student-led organization founded with the dual mission of providing high quality health services in underserved communities, while simultaneously enriching the education and professional development of graduate and professional students through service learning. Hundreds of students have volunteered their time and efforts to the clinic since its inception in 2009, employing skills and concepts learned in the classroom to help meet the health and welfare needs of the community. The clinic is made possible through the efforts of students of the IU Medical School, School of Dentistry, Physical Therapy, Social Work, and the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law. Physical therapy students from the University of Indianapolis, and pharmacy students from Butler University, also take part in the program.

Freiwald, '11, to Become General Counsel for Evansville Company

Stephanie Freiwald, '11, will become general counsel at Sterling Boiler and Mechanical, Inc. in Evansville. She began her new position on December 30.

"I will be their first-ever general counsel," Freiwald said. "I am obviously thrilled and am grateful for the opportunities my law degree has provided me in just two years."

Trained as an industrial engineer, Freiwald worked in that capacity from 2007-2008 at IET, Inc. in Toledo, Ohio. IET is an industrial engineering consulting firm and her focus was on manufacturing facilities.

Freiwald previously was an associate at the boutique construction firm Manion Stigger, LLP, in Evansville. The firm represents national level construction contractors. Sterling Boiler and Mechanical is a construction contractor that specializes in manufacturing and process technology.

"I got the job because of my industrial engineering background and my experience as a construction attorney," Freiwald said. "With my industrial engineering background and construction law experience, they said I was an ideal fit."

Baldwin Receives IBA Pro Bono Award

Tarah Baldwin, a 3L evening program student at the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law, received the Indianapolis Bar Association's Pro Bono Award at the organization's annual recognition luncheon on November 14.

In addition to being a Program on Law and State Government Fellow for 2013, Baldwin has more than 500 hours of pro bono service registered with the law school. She's taken part in programs such as the IndyBar Ask an Attorney Program, the Protective Order Pro Bono Project, Indiana Legal Service's Senior Law Project, and the IU Student Outreach Clinic, among many others.

She's interested in elder law issues, and hopes to pursue this area of law upon graduation. During the fall semester, Baldwin, along with McKinney student Sean Deneault, coordinated the Program on Law and State Government Fellowship Symposium on the topic of Elder Law.

"I have a heart for advocacy," Baldwin said. "I am very interested in elder law issues and the protection of the elderly from predatory schemes. Working with the Senior Law Project has provided me with an education to assist and protect my future clients."

Professor Waterhouse, BLSA Chosen for Diversity Awards

Professor Carlton Waterhouse and the IU McKinney School of Law Chapter of the Black Law Students Association have been named recipients of the Rabb Emison Award for their work to increase diversity in the legal profession.

Each year, the Indiana State Bar Association's Diversity Committee chooses one individual and one organization to receive the honors. Professor Waterhouse and BLSA were honored during the ISBA annual meeting in October in French Lick.

Professor Waterhouse was recognized for his work organizing the IU McKinney/Shortridge Magnet School for Law and Public Policy partnership, the goal of which is to prepare students for their roles as citizens, while exploring legal and social justice careers.

The decision to name Professor Waterhouse as the recipient of the award was unanimous on the part of the ISBA's Diversity Committee.

The IU McKinney Chapter of BLSA was honored in the organization category for the group's work with the ISBA Diversity Committee to host the inaugural Diversity and Alumni Reception that was held on February 23, 2013.

The Rabb Emison Awards honor individuals and organizations who demonstrate a commitment to promote diversity and equality in the legal profession and in ISBA membership. They are named in honor of Rabb Emison, an ISBA past president, who was instrumental in encouraging diversity in the organization.

Meet Our New Dean

An Interview with Dean Andy Klein

By Rebecca Collier Trimpe

Andrew R. Klein began his duties as dean of the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law on July 1, 2013. He has been a member of the faculty since 2000, and is the law school's twelfth dean since it became a part of IU in 1944. From 2010-2013, he served as chief of staff to IUPUI Chancellor Charles R. Bantz and since 2012, served as associate vice chancellor for academic affairs for IUPUI. In the following interview, Dean Klein shares his thoughts about becoming dean of McKinney Law and his vision for the school.

Dean Klein and his family show their support for the Indianapolis Indians at the alumni association outing in August.

What is your vision and what are your goals for the law school?

I hope our school will stand as a model for the best approach to legal education in the years ahead. Our location provides a tremendous advantage toward achieving that. We are situated in a major city and a state capitol. We are within walking distance of law firms, courts, corporations, and major non-profit organizations. This allows students an opportunity to form connections with the legal community in a way that few schools can replicate. Using this locational advantage, the McKinney students can blend classroom learning with experiential learning. We take this seriously as an institution, investing in live client clinics and one of the nation's top legal writing programs. In that environment, it's not surprising our graduates constitute a large percentage of the city's and state's business and political leadership structure. We're training students to be leaders from day one.

Flexibility and a focus on access also are critical to our success. No other law school in the state invests in an evening program. Many of our alumni are lawyers only because of the opportunity that we provide to work and attend law school at the same time. At a time where the cost of legal education is no small issue, the flexibility we offer is an important part of our mission.

Why did you want to become dean of the law school?

When I left the Chancellor's office, I felt like I was coming home. This law school has been my professional base for 14 years. My family and I are rooted in the community. The law school's faculty and staff are not just my colleagues, but also friends. I have a great affection for this institution and the people who work and study here, including the many people who are alums and friends of the school. This is a great place on every level, and I genuinely believe that the law school serves the community like almost no other institution in Indiana.

Are you involved with any campus or non-profit organizations in the community? If so, can you elaborate on that involvement?

In January 2013, I finished a four-and-a-half-year term as an elected member of the Carmel Clay School Board. I am on the board of directors of the Madame Walker Theatre Center. And I'm a longtime board member of Play Ball Indiana, a local affiliate of the national Reviving Baseball in Inner Cities (RBI) program. RBI is connected with Major League Baseball and provides opportunities for city youth to play baseball and softball in the summer and fall. The organization does tremendous things for kids locally and nationally. I am an Indiana Bar Foundation Fellow and a Distinguished Fellow of the Indianapolis Bar Foundation. As dean, I also look forward to increased involvement with both the Indianapolis Bar Association and the Indiana State Bar Association.

What were your teaching and research interests before you became dean?

I still have teaching and research interests! I would describe my interests at the intersection of tort and environmental law. I plan to continue teaching upper-level courses in both areas. My scholarship focuses on how the legal system addresses the consequences of toxic exposures, including illness caused by asbestos, chemicals, and other products.

Please tell us a little bit about your family.

I met my wife, Diane, in law school. We've been married for 23 years. She teaches for one of the nation's largest online education providers, has been involved with a number of local non-profit organizations, and is an avid half-marathoner. We have two sons. Tim is a 20-year-old sophomore at IU Bloomington, where he studies journalism. Jason is 17 years old and a junior at Carmel High School. Jason is involved in student government, school media, and plays trombone in Carmel High's concert band and orchestra. Both of our sons are big sports fans, soccer in particular. We also have a dog, Nigel, a 6-year-old smooth-coat collie. We adopted Nigel with the assistance of the law school's Director of the Ruth Lilly Law Library, Judith Anspach, who connected us with the Indiana Canine Assistance Network (ICAN). Nigel is wonderful, but a bit too vocal to have been an assistance dog!

You and Vice Dean Antony Page seem to have developed a great rapport in a short time. What's it like working with him?

Antony is a superstar. I've known that since the minute he joined our faculty. The school is very fortunate to have someone of his caliber in the role. I often tell people it's nice to have a diplomat in the Vice Dean's office. And I mean that literally! Antony served as a diplomat for the Canadian government before studying law. He does a fantastic job managing the day-to-day issues at the law school.

What is your fondest memory of your first 14 years with the law school?

Two moments stand out. First, the day we moved into Inlow Hall. I recall the pride that everyone felt at being in such an incredible environment. Second, the day that we announced Bob McKinney's transformational gift to the law school. The energy in the building during the naming ceremony was tremendous. That said, every graduation day in May creates fond memories when we watch our new graduates cross the stage and become alumni of our school. For faculty, it is truly rewarding to see the people we met during their first semester of school head off to become members of our profession.

ALTERNATIVE CAREERS

This is the second in a series of articles about IU McKinney Lawyers who have taken “the road less travelled” in terms of their career paths. In this issue, we introduce you to individuals who use their legal expertise in the field of real estate.

Law Degrees Contribute to Alumni Success in Real Estate

by Alicia Dean Carlson

Law schools aspire to arm graduates with important skills—how to negotiate, how to structure financial transactions, and how to decipher the tax code are just a few—but not everyone aspires to take those skills to a law firm or courtroom.

For some alumni, commercial real estate and its labyrinth of buying, financing, building and leasing is more of a draw. The fact that the same skills come into play proves that a law degree provides unique career versatility for IU McKinney grads more interested in land than litigation.

Meet nine graduates of IU McKinney School of Law who chose careers related to real estate.

Tom Schneider, '82

Picture stringing together 44 malls the size of the Fashion Mall at Keystone at the Crossing in Indianapolis to get a sense of the amount of retail real estate Tom Schneider, '82, has been involved in—nearly 30 million square feet—during his career. In addition, his projects included various office, residential and hotel developments in a number of mixed-use projects.

Schneider, an Indianapolis native, graduated from IU-Bloomington in 1972 and took his business degree to work at Melvin Simon & Associates. After a brief stint in California, Schneider returned to Indianapolis and decided to go to law school. So Schneider worked during the day and, five nights each week, went to law school.

Despite the grind, Schneider liked law school and the other part-time, evening students. He especially enjoyed classes that were applicable to his work in real estate, including Professor Debra Falender's real estate and legal writing classes and former Dean Gerald Bepko's commercial law courses. He signed up for every available tax class with Professor Jegen, whose formidable style was a welcome challenge.

"I remember coming back from a break with Professor Jegen starting the class by saying, 'It's going to be me and you, Mr. Schneider, for the next hour.'"

Although he practiced law in a small firm for a short time, Schneider soon returned to Simon. Today, he is executive vice president of development with responsibilities for the development of new malls, town centers and specialty centers, re-development of larger "transformational developments" and, along the way, various developments undertaken with various strategic partners. Much of the work he does involves negotiating with retailers, as well as with municipalities and federal agencies to gain the right to build. "It's good to have that level of understanding of what we need to get done," he says. "My law degree, coupled with my business experience, has been invaluable to my career and allows me to better work with counsel to draft agreements that accomplish our goals and withstand decades of scrutiny."

"I think for me, law school was a worthwhile thing to do," Schneider says. "Not that it wasn't difficult and a tremendous time and energy commitment, but looking back I am glad I did it."

James Barkley, '77

From his office on the 14th floor of Simon Property Group Inc., Jim Barkley '77 has an expansive view of downtown Indianapolis and beyond. As general counsel and secretary for the Indianapolis-based retail real estate giant, his 36-year career provides him with a view, too, of the commercial real estate industry.

Shopping malls are part of life in most of the world now, but not when Barkley, a baby boomer born in South Bend, Indiana, was growing up.

"It is a business that has matured in one generation," Barkley says.

In law school, Barkley was engaged to marry his wife, Cindy, and needed a job. He spotted a job opening—written on an index card on a bulletin board in the law school—and applied for the law clerk position at Melvin Simon & Associates, then located on two floors of a Merchants Bank building on Meridian Street.

"In the late 1970s, the economy was not that great. When you're 25 or 26 years old, engaged to be married, and offered a job in which you'll actually get a paycheck, you take it. I was given a lot of opportunity in a business that seemed to be growing. I was very, very lucky."

Barkley started his career leasing to names synonymous with shopping malls—The Gap, The Limited, Zales, and Radio Shack. In the early 1980s, he began working in land acquisition and became assistant general counsel at Simon. In 1992, he was named general counsel and helped oversee the company's initial public offering, mergers, acquisitions, and continued global expansion.

"I still like the transactional part of the work. There is an adrenaline piece to this. If you are buying or selling something, the idea of working to put the deal together, to take it from a gleam in someone's eye to closing the deal—that's a lot of fun."

Todd Eads, '94

For Todd Eads there was only one option after graduating with a bachelor's degree in political science: law school.

In his first year or so at IU McKinney, he thought he might go into civil rights law or practice in a firm, but then he became a law clerk at Simon Property Group, Inc. Today he is a leasing representative, negotiating contracts with the retail stores that are responsible for a mall's stream of revenue.

"I was introduced to the business side of law while clerking at Simon Property Group," Eads says. "At that point, I concluded that negotiating business terms was more interesting and varied than negotiating the same legal terms of a contract over and over. I also learned that, although compensation may initially be less than going into law, ultimately it might be more lucrative to be on the business side of real estate transactions."

Todd Eads, '94
Simon Property Group, Inc.

A law degree is such an asset in the business that it's not unusual to work with other attorneys in leasing and land development. For Eads, the skills he learned in law school and in his work at Simon center on negotiating to consummate a deal.

"It's essential to understand what is important to the other side," he says. "Often, what is important to them is not really what is of most importance to you, so if you can give, it helps in the transaction. And transactions are the deals that result in revenues."

Dana Grimes, '11

Dana Grimes came to Simon Property Group, Inc., eight years ago as a paralegal, plucked from a law practice in Bloomington after posting her resume on Monster.com.

Today she's a staff attorney in the mall developer's land development area, after spending four years as a full-time Simon employee and part-time law student.

Grimes credits IU McKinney Dean Andrew Klein with an inspiring torts class, as well as Professor Eric Dannenmaier, director of the Environmental, Energy & Natural Resources Law Program, with making a lasting impact on the work she does, which includes reviewing environmental reports, permits, deed restrictions, and other land-related matters.

Dana Grimes, '11
Simon Property Group, Inc.

"It was Professor Tom Wilson's Land Transfer and Finance class that 'sealed the deal' for me wanting to practice real estate law," Grimes says.

"Working at Simon all the way through law school really helped me decide I didn't want to spend my time in a large firm," Grimes says. "I tell people that the job I have now is my dream job."

Mike Wells, '79

Mike Wells is president of REI Investments, Inc., and has been involved in a number of significant real estate projects including the JW Marriott Hotel, Marriott Place, Circle Centre, WellPoint Operation Center, Emmis Communications Headquarters, and the Indianapolis Marriott Hotel, all in downtown Indianapolis.

Wells may not practice law in a traditional sense, but it's a key part of his work as a developer.

"My experience as a lawyer was invaluable in my being able to identify issues early in the real estate development process, thereby affording me the time to find a resolution to those issues," Wells says. "Another advantage of a legal degree is the ability to communicate efficiently with our legal counsel, which helps speed up the development process."

Mike Wells, '79
REI Investments

David Flaherty, '84
Flaherty & Collins Development

David Flaherty, '84

As co-owner and CEO of Flaherty & Collins Development, David Flaherty has helped to complete hundreds of real estate transactions, from acquisitions to dispositions, development to financing since the company was founded in 1993.

Before that, he worked in leasing for Indianapolis-based Revel Companies, a real estate company where he split his time between commercial leasing and legal work, but he soon realized that leasing was more lucrative.

For Flaherty, who studied business as an undergrad before going to law school, the business clearly had appeal.

"After being in law school and being poor for so long, I was ready to earn money," Flaherty says.

In recent years, Flaherty & Collins has specialized in mixed-use projects, such as Cosmopolitan on the Canal near the IU-PUI campus, which offers both apartment homes and retail space. It's a trend that appeals to modern apartment dwellers focused on amenities associated with urban living. Getting municipal support for such projects is usually necessary.

That's when it helps to be a lawyer, although Flaherty depends on others to do most of the legal work.

"In our business, the reality is that everything is so specialized that no one lawyer could do everything for our firm. We turn to the real experts when we need help," Flaherty says. "The law degree helps, and I'm proud of passing the bar and being a lawyer. It helps develop a way of thinking and communicating, and you have to do a lot of both in our business."

Steve Henke, '77

Steve Henke practiced law for more than 20 years and his name is still on the Coots Henke & Wheeler shingle in Carmel, but real estate is his primary business these days.

Henke is the developer behind massive projects in Westfield, including Bridgewater Club, a residential golf course community built over the last decade, the 400-acre Grand Park Sports Campus youth sports complex—slated to open in March—and Grand Park Village, a mixed use project surrounding a 10-acre lake. Plans for another new development, the 1,500 home Chatham Hills on 750 acres, will include an 18-hole Pete Dye championship golf course. It's also the largest residential project in central Indiana since the real estate downturn in 2008.

Real estate development offers a lot more freedom than a law practice, says Henke, who graduated from Indiana University-Bloomington with a degree in business in 1973. After law school, he practiced law with Locke Reynolds in Indianapolis but once he established a law firm in Carmel, he and his partners began buying and selling commercial properties. By the time he began work on the Bridgewater Club, he chose to be listed of counsel with the firm instead of an active partner.

Chatham Hills took more than five years to put together,

Steve Henke, '77
Coots Henke & Wheeler

Tadd Miller, '06
Milhaus Development

buying one property, then another to create a project with just the right topography and of sufficient size, he notes.

"I like putting the deals together," Henke says. "It's really a lot of fun."

Tadd Miller, '06

As co-founder and president of Milhaus Development, Tadd Miller has led the development, finance and construction of urban multi-family and mixed-use properties throughout the Midwest and Florida.

In Indianapolis, Milhaus has made headlines for Downtown Indianapolis projects, including mixed-use residential and commercial projects on Virginia Avenue and across from the former Market Square Arena site.

Miller says he "always wanted to build stuff," dating back to age 10, when he asked for a drafting table for Christmas. He graduated from the College of Architecture and Urban Planning at Ball State University—supporting himself and learning hands-on skills working as a general contractor—and completed an MBA at Indiana Wesleyan before starting law school.

"I never really went to law school with the intent to be a lawyer in a law firm," Miller says. "Most of the smart people in my business went to law school. I just saw the need for knowledge."

Law school "gave me the ability to deal with the unexpected," Miller says.

Rex Barrett, '81

In the late 1970s, it was clear that one of the business partners in the newly formed real estate management company, Barrett & Stokely, should go to law school.

DePauw grad Rex Barrett, who founded the company with his brother and other partners, decided to go.

"In our business, there is a lot of real estate legal analysis to be done—tax, contracts, all of the things you learn in law school," Barrett says. "I didn't know much then, but I knew enough to know it would be beneficial."

Since its founding in 1975, Barrett & Stokely, Inc. has been engaged in the acquisition, ownership, management, and disposition of income producing properties, managing more than 130 properties, including 15,000 multi-family units and 2,500,000 square feet of office and retail space in Indiana, Tennessee, Alabama, Ohio, Kentucky, Illinois, Michigan, and Georgia.

The business has thrived with a conservative approach, says Barrett. He shares his experience with the Kelley School of Business, where he serves as a director for the Benecki Center for Real Estate Studies.

Barrett says the company depends on good legal advice, such as what they get from Thomas Mariani, '97, as general counsel. As for himself, Barrett says he uses his law degree to understand what questions to ask, even if he doesn't know the answers. "I'm really a real estate guy who went to law school," he says. ♦

PLSG Symposium

Examines State Government Reactions to Aging Populations

by Rebecca Collier Trimpe

The 12th annual Program on Law and State Government Fellowship Symposium took place on September 20 at Inlow Hall. The two PLSG Fellows for 2013, Sean Denault and Tarah M.C. Baldwin, chose a topic that impacts everyone eventually: aging. They titled their day-long event “State Governments Face the Realities of Aging Populations.”

(BELOW) Stetson University School of Law Professor Rebecca Morgan delivered the keynote lecture at the day-long event. She is the director of Stetson's Center for Excellence in Elder Law.

After welcoming remarks by Dean Andy Klein, Sean Deneault began the morning with his address titled "Medicare Fraud: The State Enforcement Option." He was followed by Professor David Orentlicher, co-director of the Hall Center for Law and Health, who spoke about "Aging Populations and State Government Policy."

Tarah Baldwin then delivered her address, "Bilking the Elderly: A Fight for Financial Autonomy and Review of Use and Misuse of Powers of Attorney and Guardianships." This was followed by a panel discussion she moderated, with the topic "Legal Tools for Balancing Antinomy and Protection: Advocacy, Scholarship, and Practice." Panelists were attorney Rebecca Geyer of Rebecca Geyer & Associates; Claire Lewis, '82, of the Law Office of Claire Lewis; and Valparaiso University School of Law Professor Linda Whitton.

Stetson University School of Law Professor Rebecca Morgan delivered the keynote lecture "What the Future of Aging Means to All of Us." She is the director of her law school's Center for Excellence in Elder Law. Her remarks were followed by a panel discussion moderated by Deneault with the topic "Recent Developments in Indiana Elder Law." Panelists included Allen Pope, chief counsel and director of the Medicaid Fraud Control Unit of the Indiana Attorney General's Office; George Slater, '79, of Slater Law Office; and Dennis Frick, director of the Senior Law Project of Indiana Legal Services. PLSG Executive Director, Professor Cynthia Baker, offered closing remarks. ♦

Mr. Spurlock, a graduate of McKinney Law, earned his bachelor's degree in business from IU in 1949. Prior to practicing law, Mr. Spurlock owned a Burger Chef franchise and also was a regional manager for National Cash Register. He is 89 years old and practices in Indianapolis. He dedicates his practice to helping the elderly and protecting them against predatory guardianships. ♦

Hall Center Hosts Conference on Health, Disability, and the Law

On June 14, the Hall Center for Law and Health hosted the annual Conference on Health, Disability, and the Law in the Wynne Courtroom. The topic was “Education, Stability and Foster Care: Implementing IDEA and the Fostering Connection Act for Youth in Foster Care.” The keynote speakers included Dr. Peter Pecora, Professor of Social Work at the University of Washington School of Social Work, and managing director of research services for the Casey Family Programs, and Elaine Fink, managing attorney for the Legal Aid Society of Southwest Ohio.

Following welcomes from conference director, Heather McCabe, '03, from the IU School of Social Work; Dr. Steven M. Koch, of the IU School of Medicine, and Professor Nicolas P. Terry, the Hall Render Professor of Law and Co-director of the Hall Center for Law and Health, the conference got underway with Professor Pecora's keynote address. His talk was entitled “The Role of Placement Stability for Education and other Areas of Success for Youth in Foster Care.” The plenary session featured Ms. Fink, who spoke on the topic “Collaboration to Support Student Success and Systemic Change.”

An afternoon panel discussion was devoted to services available in Indiana and included representatives from the Villages and the Department of Child Services, along with a doctoral student from IUPUI. Dr. Nancy Swigonski from the IU School of Medicine addressed “Fostering Continuity in Medical Care,” and a late afternoon session explored the future of foster care. ♦

Hall Center Event Focuses on Neuroscience Issues

The law school's Hall Center for Law and Health hosted a conference on the topic "Will Neuroscience Redefine Mental Injury?" on October 4 in the Wynne Courtroom. The day's program examined some of the evolving technologies used to demonstrate mental injury and explored the potential impact of neuroscientific data in legal decision making.

Speakers included Thomas W. McAllister, M.D., the Albert E. Sterne Professor and Chair, Department of Psychiatry at the IU School of Medicine and Tracy D. Gunter, M.D., Associate Professor of Clinical Psychiatry at the IU School of Medicine and Adjunct Professor of Law at the McKinney School, who addressed the topic "Neuroimaging in Emotional and Physical Trauma."

A panel discussion on "Neuroscience and Civil Law" featured Professor Stacey A. Tovino, Lincy Professor of Law at the William S. Boyd School of Law at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas; Betsy J. Grey, Professor of Law and Alan A. Matheson Fellow, and Faculty Fellow in the Center for Law, Science and Innovation, at the Arizona State University Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law in Tempe, Arizona; and Professor Nicolas P. Terry, Hall Render Professor of Law at IU McKinney.

A panel discussion rounded out the day, with participants William Winingham, '79, partner, Wilson Kehoe Winingham, LLC; Professor Ross D. Silverman, Professor of Health Policy and Management at the IU Fairbanks School of Public Health and Professor Jennifer Drobac of IU McKinney. ♦

Center for Intellectual Property Law and Innovation Hosts Speakers

The law school's Center for Intellectual Property Law and Innovation hosted speakers in the spring and fall of 2013.

In April, the IP Center invited Professor Roberta Rosenthal Kwall to speak on the topic "Human Rights and Authorship Norms: Comparative Traditions." Professor Kwall is the Raymond P. Niro Professor of Intellectual Property Law and the co-director of the DePaul University College of Law Center for Jewish Law and Judaic Studies. On October 2, the IP Center Lecture Series featured a lecture by Professor Robin Feldman, the director of the Institute for Innovation Law at the University of California Hastings College of Law. She spoke on the subject of "Patent Trolling: An Empirical Analysis of Patent Monetization Entities in U.S. Litigation." ♦

Professor Lea Shaver Invited to Present at UN Council

Professor Lea Shaver travelled to Geneva on October 3 and 4 for the “Seminar on the Right to Enjoy the Benefits of Scientific Progress and its Applications.”

The event was a gathering of experts to advise the United Nations Human Rights Council on the meaning of the “right to enjoy the benefits of scientific progress and its applications,” which Professor Shaver says she prefers to call “the right to science.” Attendees were experts in this area, and the UN Special Rapporteur. The report on the event will go back to the UN Human Rights Council for consideration.

“Whereas domestically our constitutional rights are interpreted by the courts in the context of specific cases, internationally there is a process of discussion and norm development, of which this is a small part,” Professor Shaver said of the seminar. “The goal of the event was to promote awareness and understanding of the right to science and resolve some key questions about what it means and what governments should be doing to respect it.”

Professor Shaver is an Associate Professor of Law and a Dean’s Fellow. She taught at Yale Law School and Hofstra Law School before joining the IU McKinney faculty in 2012. She teaches intellectual property, copyright, and patent law. ♦

Active Summer for Joint Center for Asian Law Studies

The Joint Center for Asian Law Studies sponsored a number of events over the summer of 2013. A rundown of summer activities is listed here.

Twenty-six Students Take Part in 26th Year of Chinese Law Summer Program

From May 16 to June 16, Professor Tom Wilson served as resident professor for the IU McKinney School of Law Chinese Law Summer Program. This program, now in its 26th year in China, is held at the Renmin University of China Law School in Beijing. Renmin University has been the IU McKinney School's partner in China since 1998. In 2012, the Ministry of Education of the PRC ranked Renmin University the number one law school in China. A total of 26 students participated in the 2013 program, including students from Brazil, Canada, and Taiwan. ♦

Professor Tom Wilson Participates in Several Events in China in May

On May 25, Professor Tom Wilson participated in the annual plenary meeting of the board of editors of Frontiers of Law in China, a peer-reviewed, English language law review published in Beijing. The mission of the review is to provide a forum for scholars interested in Chinese law and legal issues involved in the reform of the Chinese legal system. Professor Wilson was appointed to the board of editors in early 2013.

On May 26, Professor Wilson was an invited participant in a conference on Modernity and Legal Culture in China. The conference, held in Beijing, explored Chinese and western concepts and perceptions about modernity. Attendees at the conference included invited scholars from law schools in China, Great Britain, Japan, South Korea, and Taiwan.

On May 29, Professor Wilson delivered a lecture at China Agricultural University Law School. The topic of the lecture was "Truth-Seeking in Adversarial and Inquisitorial Systems." Following the lectures, Professor Wilson met with CAU Dean Yu Huajiang to discuss ways the two law schools can collaborate. CAU Professor Weng Yijie is currently a visiting scholar at IU McKinney School of Law. ♦

IU McKinney Students Participate in 4th International Forum

Professor Tom Wilson, along with Renmin University of China Professor Jiang Dong, organized the fourth annual International Forum for Law Students, which took place at Renmin University on June 2. Renmin University Professor, and IU McKinney alumnus, Ding Xiangshun, '06, created the forum to provide a platform for law students to study issues relating to legal education and the practice of law in an era of globalization. Six IU McKinney students made presentations at the forum. Other student participants were from law schools in Australia, Brazil, Canada, Japan, Mongolia, South Africa, South Korea, Switzerland, and Taiwan. ♦

Reunion Held in Beijing for Chinese Alumni

The annual reunion of Chinese alumni of the IU McKinney School of Law was held on June 2, in Beijing. Chinese nationals who earned LL.M. and J.D. degrees were joined at the reunion by Chinese law professors who are alumni of IU McKinney's visiting scholar program. Over 125 students from China have graduated from the IU McKinney School of Law since 2003. Dean Gary Roberts and Professor Tom Wilson represented the law school at the reunion, which included a special event—the unveiling of a painting of lady justice in China. The painting, by Indianapolis artist Donna Carr, is a gift from the IU McKinney School of Law to the Renmin University of China Law School. Carr described the message conveyed by the symbolism in the painting, and Dean Roberts said the gift recognizes the deep and long-standing relationship between the two law schools. The 16-year partnership of the two schools represents the longest continuous international relationship for both schools. ♦

Program in American Law Hosts Students from Sun Yat-sen University

A total of 14 students and administrators from Sun Yat-sen University in Guangzhou, China, visited the IU McKinney School of Law from July 2 through July 13 for the second annual Program in American Law. The program consists of daily lectures on substantive law topics, including constitutional law, administrative law, criminal law, corporate law, and international law.

Students also participated in law-related field trips, where they met with Indiana Supreme Court Justice Steven David, '82; Indiana Senators Phil Boots and Mike Delph, '10; Indiana Representative Eric Koch, Lt. Governor Sue Ellspermann, Secretary of State Connie Lawson, and Attorney General Greg Zoeller. They also met with U.S. District Court Judge Jane Magnus-Stinson, '83; attended a jury trial in the Marion Superior Court, and met with partners J. Murray Clark, '82; and Scott Chinn, '94; and pro-bono manager Monica A. Fennell at the offices of Faegre Baker Daniels.

The students from Sun Yat-sen University were also able to have cultural experiences, as they toured the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, attended an Indianapolis Indians game, saw the downtown Independence Day fireworks display, and attended a concert on the canal and took swing dance lessons at the Indiana Historical Society. The Sun Yat-sen University Summer Program is directed by Professor Tom Wilson. ♦

International Visitors from State Department Leadership Program Visit IU McKinney

Professor George Edwards hosted a delegation from the Philippines visiting the United States under the auspices of the Department of State's International Visitor Leadership Program. The event was September 27 at the law school, and several IU McKinney students took part.

Visiting the law school were Ronald Aday Almirol, a member of the Philippine Peacekeeping Mission assigned to Port-au-Prince, Haiti; Alexander Guasis Bautista, an investigation agent of the National Bureau of Investigation; Hazel Canet Decena-Valdez, assistant state prosecutor with the National Prosecution Service, Department of Justice; and Al Acong Parreno, partner with the law firm Diaz Parreno Caringal.

The program's objective is to provide a means for participants to study U.S. methods for effective investigation and prosecution of human rights cases; examine best practices to investigate and build cases, specifically regarding extrajudicial killings; compare challenges with extrajudicial killings in the Philippines to human rights concerns in the U.S.; and increase knowledge of the U.S. justice system and legal education system.

Professor Edwards is the Carl M. Gray Professor of Law, and the founding director of the Program in International Human Rights Law. Founded in 1997, the PIHRL has placed 170 law students in internships in 55 countries worldwide. ♦

Brazilian Law Professors and Students Attend Program at IU McKinney

A group of Brazilian law professors and students, plus a federal prosecutor, arrived on August 31 to participate in a nine-day program on American law at IU McKinney. Participants came from two law schools in the state of Espirito Santo, Brazil—Faculdades Integradas Espirito Santenses and Faculdade de Direito Cachoeiro de Itapemirim.

The program consisted of lectures and law-related field trips. Lecture topics included constitutional law, administrative law, environmental law, freedom of information legislation, and regulation of the legal profession. In their field trips, the participants met with Justice Steven David, '82, at the Indiana Supreme Court, with Senator Brandt Hershman, '13, in the Senate chamber, with Attorney General Greg Zoeller at the office of the Attorney General, with Judge William T. Lawrence, '73, at the U.S. District Court, and with Matthew Albaugh, '01, Scott Chinn, '94, and Monica Fennell at the offices of Faegre Baker Daniels. This was the fifth consecutive year for the program, which was founded in 2009 by Professor Tom Wilson. The sixth program will take place from August 31 to September 7, 2014. ♦

Students and law professors from Brazil took part in a nine-day program in American law hosted at IU McKinney. The program is entering its sixth year.

Business and Human Rights: What's the Board Got to do with It?

On April 12, the law school hosted Professor Jena Martin of the West Virginia College of Law, who spoke about corporate scandals related to human rights issues. Her presentation examined the appropriate role of an organization's board of directors in formulating a framework for proactive corporate responsibility in light of the Alien Tort Claims Act and the United Nations' Guiding Principles on corporate responsibility and human rights. ♦

Inaugural Faculty Book Talk Series at IU McKinney

Faculty authors were in the spotlight this fall as McKinney Law launched its new Faculty Book Talk Series. Students, alumni, and friends of the law school were invited to listen to our faculty talk about their latest book releases.

Gerard Magliocca American Founding Son

First in the series on September 10 was Professor Gerard Magliocca, whose latest work, American Founding Son: John Bingham and the Invention of the Fourteenth Amendment, was published in September by New York University Press. This work is Professor Magliocca's third book. A leading antislavery lawyer and congressman from Ohio, Bingham wrote the most important part of the Fourteenth Amendment to the Constitution, which guarantees fundamental rights and equality to all Americans. More than any other figure of his day, Bingham played the key role in shaping the Union's policy towards the occupied ex-Confederate States, with consequences that still haunt our politics today.

Yvonne Dutton Rules, Politics, and the International Criminal Court

Next up was Professor Yvonne Dutton on September 12, when she talked about her book Rules, Politics, and the International Criminal Court: Committing to the Court. The book was published in May by Routledge Press. In the book, Professor Dutton examines the International Criminal Court (ICC) as well as whether and how its enforcement mechanism influences state membership. The book also considers the court's ability to realize treaty goals by considering questions like why states created the ICC and gave it such a strong enforcement mechanism, and whether its enforcement abilities will be sufficient to hold states accountable to their commitment to the ICC, among other questions.

McKinney Law Presents Supreme Court Forum

Looking Back: Major Cases from the United States Supreme Court in 2013

On September 24, faculty members from the law school discussed recent cases decided by the U.S. Supreme Court. The forum, which will become an annual September event at McKinney Law to commemorate Constitution Day, took place in the Wynne Courtroom. Faculty participants were Professors Shawn Boyne, Jennifer Drobac, George Edwards, David Orentlicher and Michael Pitts. They discussed subjects including criminal law, same-sex marriage, voting rights and international human rights. ♦

David Orentlicher

Two Presidents are Better than One

Finally, Professor David Orentlicher discussed his book Two Presidents are Better than One: the Case for a Bipartisan Executive Branch on September 19. The book was published in March by New York University Press. In the book, Professor Orentlicher analyzes the histories of other countries with a plural executive branch and shows past examples of bipartisan cooperation within Congress. He also illustrates how to implement a two-person, two-party presidency. Ultimately, Two Presidents Are Better Than One demonstrates the importance of constitutional reform to rebalance power between the executive and legislative branches and contain partisan conflict in Washington.

IU McKinney Hosts International Conference

More than 100 legal scholars from around the world gathered at the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law for the second annual “New Perspectives in Comparative Law Conference,” April 18 and 19. Sponsored by the Younger Comparativists Committee of the American Society of Comparative Law, the conference is designed to highlight, develop and promote the scholarship of new and younger comparativists.

Panel discussions spanned a wide variety of topics from the comparativist perspective on intellectual property and technology, to issues in transnational criminal law. A welcome reception took place at Barnes & Thornburg in downtown Indianapolis.

Professor Shawn Boyne and Mohamed Arafa, S.J.D. '13, were the co-chairs for the conference program committee. Arafa taught as an adjunct professor at McKinney Law during the fall 2013 semester. Other participants with ties to the law school included Ying Chen, LL.M. '07, S.J.D., '13; Angélique Devaux, LL.M., '13; and Professors James Nehf, Margaret Ryznar, and Yvonne Dutton. ❖

Annual James P. White Lecture Features Association of American Law Schools Executive

The Annual James P. White Lecture on Legal Education for the 2013-14 academic year took place on October 15 in the Wynne Courtroom. This year's White Lecturer was Susan Prager, executive director and chief executive officer of the Association of American Law Schools, who spoke on the topic, "Legal Education Matters."

Susan Prager is a graduate of Stanford University and the UCLA School of Law, where she served as editor-in-chief of the UCLA LAW REVIEW. She joined the UCLA faculty in 1972, became dean a decade later, and served as dean from 1982-1998 — the longest tenure of any dean in UCLA law school history. At the time Prager became dean, she was one of only two female law deans in the country.

Prager served on the Board of Trustees of Stanford University for 14 years. She chaired the board's Academic Policy Committee and was a vice president of the board. She left UCLA in 1999 to become provost at Dartmouth College, and recently was president of Occidental College in Los Angeles. Prager is a longtime director of the Pacific Mutual Holding Company, which owns Pacific Life Insurance Company. Over the years she has been engaged in the national legal education community in a wide variety of ways, serving as AALS President in 1986. In May, she was appointed dean of Southwestern Law School in Los Angeles—the first woman to hold that position at the institution—and was scheduled to begin those duties in late fall of 2013.

The James P. White Lecture on Legal Education was created when Professor White retired in 2000 after 26 years as Consultant on Legal Education to the American Bar Association. He continues to serve as Consultant Emeritus. The office is responsible for law school accreditation, collection of statistics, and interfacing with other legal education entities. Members of the ABA's Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar and other friends contributed to the establishment of this annual lecture in Professor White's honor at IU McKinney Law, where he has served on the faculty since 1966. ♦

Pro Bono and Clinical Programs Celebrate Students During 2013 Event

Students, faculty, staff and alumni gathered in the law school's atrium on April 16 for the celebration of the Pro Bono Program's 20th anniversary during the 2013 Pro Bono and Clinical Program awards and recognition reception. The 2013 class contributed 16,167 hours of pro bono service, bringing the program's total to 157,498 hours of legal services for those of limited means.

Marion Superior Judge David Shaheed, '84, was on hand to present the Heartland Pro Bono Council Award to Tricia Milanese, '11. Professor Florence Wagman Roisman introduced the guest speaker, John Paul Berlon, '00, who returned to IU McKinney specifically for the Pro Bono Program's 20th anniversary celebration. The award that bears his name goes to the student who has contributed the most pro bono service during her or his law school career. The 2013 John Paul Berlon Award went to Nabeela Virgee, '13. Awards also were given to clinical program students and other students who contributed pro bono service during law school.

Equal Justice Works Celebrates Fifth Annual Public Interest Recognition Dinner

The IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law chapter of Equal Justice Works celebrated its fifth annual Public Interest Recognition Dinner on April 13 in the Inlow Hall atrium. Proceeds from the event support the Loan Repayment Assistance Program endowment, which helps IU McKinney graduates who work in public interest law to repay their student loans. Headlining the event was Professor Frank Sullivan, Jr., who offered remarks to one of the largest crowds the event has drawn so far.

Honored for their work in public interest law for 2013 were Dennis Bland, '92, John Floreancig, '89, and Ellen Quigley, '88.

Bland is president of the Center for Leadership Development, a non-profit Indianapolis organization dedicated to preparing minority youth for academic, college, and career success. Prior to joining the center, Bland practiced law for nine years specializing in medical malpractice litigation and insurance law.

Floreancig is general counsel at the Indianapolis Legal Aid Society, which was the first organization of its kind in Indiana. It has operated continuously since its opening in the 1920s. It's the largest organization in the state devoted to non-ideological, non-sectarian, non-governmental provision of civil legal

Evening of Celebration

H o n o r s A l u m n i

The law school's Evening of Celebration, co-sponsored by the IU McKinney Law Alumni Association, took place on Friday, May 3 at the Indianapolis Marriott Downtown. The program began with a CLE offering featuring Professor Sheila Suess Kennedy, '75, who spoke on the topic, "How Dumb Are We?" Her talk addressed the growing evidence that large segments of the American public do not possess a basic understanding of the rule of law. She explored what the consequences of America's "civic deficit" might be for law and government.

A reception followed, recognizing Dean Gary Roberts for his years of service at the helm of the school, and also honoring the 2013 alumni award recipients.

The Distinguished Alumnus Award was presented to Mark Roesler, '82. Roesler is founder, chairman and CEO of CMG Worldwide, the pre-eminent authority on the valuing, marketing and protecting of celebrities' intellectual property rights. In a 2009 segment of "60 Minutes," television journalist Steve Kroft said, "No other agent in the world represents more famous people than Mark Roesler, stroll down Hollywood Boulevard with him and he'll point out 62 of his clients who are immortalized with their own stars on the 'Walk of Fame'..." The law school graduate has represented more than 1,000 celebrities, including such icons and legends as Elvis Presley, Norman Rockwell, Marlon Brando, James Dean, Jackie Robinson and Amelia Earhart. Roesler and his company represent the marketing and legal interests of his various clients, particularly focusing on establishing their rights of publicity, trademarks and copyrights. Roesler is an active member of the school's board of visitors.

Recipients of the Early Career Achievement Awards include Andrea Ciobanu, '10; Kenan Farrell, '03, Janet Gongola, '03 and Kirby Lee, '03.

Andrea Ciobanu practices in the areas of civil rights and litigation, education law, ADA compliance, family law, and appellate practice. She also serves as a consultant to the Indiana Supreme Court on its civil law and family law pilot project, and works with the Indianapolis Bar Association's Family Law Executive Committee. A passionate supporter of her alma mater, Ciobanu is a permanent member of the host committee for the McKinney Law's Equal Justice Works dinner, and is a frequent speaker for student programs.

Kenan Farrell advises clients on a range of business and intellectual property issues, including copyright, trademark, trade secret, patent and privacy issues, as they relate to technology, new media and the arts. He has provided legal services to businesses and non-profits in international and domestic transactions, as well as litigation and litigation avoidance counsel in state and federal matters. An adjunct professor of art and museum law at McKinney, Farrell is involved in several arts organizations in Indianapolis. He serves as secretary of the Kurt Vonnegut Memorial Library.

Janet Gongola is the patent reform coordinator at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. In this capacity, she handles the agency's implementation of the America Invents Act. Gongola also is the associate commissioner for patent examination policy. She is an adjunct professor at the George Mason University School of Law and the George Washington University Law School. Before joining the patent office, Gongola served as a law clerk for Chief Judge Paul R. Michel in the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit Court and for Chief Judge Sue L. Robinson in the U.S. District Court for the District of Delaware. She also worked as a patent attorney, patent agent, and research chemist at Eli Lilly and Company in Indianapolis.

Kirby Lee is a trial attorney at the U.S. Department of Justice where he represents the federal government in intellectual property disputes, including patent, copyright and trademark matters. Last year, the department's intellectual property task force selected Lee for a White House detail, and Lee served as senior policy advisor to the intellectual property enforcement coordinator in the Executive Office of the President. Lee was a visiting fellow as part of the Harvard Law School Wasserstein Fellowship Program for the 2012-2013 academic year. ♦

McKinney Law Commencement

Features Human Rights Advocate as Keynote Speaker

Commencement ceremonies for the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law took place on Saturday, May 11, 2013, in the Sagamore Ballroom of the Indiana Convention Center. Three students received Doctor of Juridical Science degrees, 25 students received Master of Laws degrees and 265 students received Doctor of Jurisprudence degrees.

Following remarks by Dean Gary Roberts, student speakers Flavia Martinelli de Medeiros for the LL.M. division, Beau Badeaux for the full-time, J.D. division, and Matt Olsen for the part-time J.D. division, addressed their fellow graduates. The Faculty Prize was presented to Andrea Kochert by Vice Dean Antony Page.

The commencement address was given by Mario Joseph, a human rights attorney from the Bureau des Avocats Internationaux (BAI), Port-au-Prince, Haiti. During his more than 20 years of human rights work, Joseph has spearheaded historic human rights cases, including the Raboteau Massacre trial in 2000, hailed as one of the most important human rights cases ever in the Western Hemisphere. The Raboteau prosecution and the BAI's cooperation with U.S. immigration officials led to the deportation of three former Haitian generals, including the highest-ranked officer ever deported from the U.S. on human rights grounds. Joseph was awarded the Judith Lee Stronach Human Rights Award from the Center for Justice & Accountability, the Alexander Human Rights Award from Santa Clara University, and an Honorary Doctor of Humane Letters from the University of San Francisco. In 2013, he was an inaugural recipient of the Martin Ennals Prize for his work in human rights.

Professors Gerard Magliocca and Frank Emmert conducted the hooding ceremony for the S.J.D. graduates, while Professors Karen Bravo and Tom Wilson officiated during the hooding ceremony for the LL.M. graduates. Hooding ceremony faculty for the J.D. recipients were Professor Eric Dannenmaier, Vice Dean Antony Page, and Professors Michael Pitts and Joel Schumm. Law school marshals were Professor George Edwards and Professor Schumm. Music was provided by the IUPUI Ceremonial Ensemble. ♦

Lunch During Bar Exam Gives Recent IU McKinney Graduates Chance to Unwind

Newly minted alumni of the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law took the Indiana Bar Exam on July 30 and 31 at the Convention Center in downtown Indianapolis. They didn't have to go far to have lunch and see some familiar faces. The IU McKinney Office of Student Affairs and the law school's Alumni Association treated the exam takers to lunch on both days of the exam. The effort was coordinated by Associate Director of Student Affairs Carlota Toledo and Director of Alumni Programs Danny Kibble. ♦

ABA Task Force Meets at IU McKinney to Discuss Legal Education's Future

The American Bar Association's Task Force on the Future of Legal Education met at the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law on April 24. The task force is chaired by former Indiana Supreme Court Chief Justice Randall T. Shepard, who is a visiting professor at the law school, and executive in residence at the IU Public Policy Institute.

Sessions throughout the day covered current challenges; licensing, finance and admissions; as well as education delivery, innovation and barriers. Experts from a variety of perspectives offered their insights, including former Indiana Supreme Court Justice Frank Sullivan, Jr., now professor of practice at the law school.

The Task Force issued a draft report in September, the text of which can be found at http://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/professional\_responsibility/taskforcecomments/task\_force\_on\_legal\_education\_draft\_report\_september2013.authcheckdam.pdf ♦

Students Eager to Take Part in Professor Cynthia Adams' New Negotiations Class

So many students wanted to take part in Professor Cynthia Adams' newly formed negotiations class this summer that there was a waiting list to get into it. The "learn by doing" approach was a hit with students. "Students were encouraged to figure out issues on their own under the careful eye of Professor Adams. She provided insights and general information, but never once did I hear her tell a group what they should or should not do," said IU McKinney student Caitlin Brandon. "She knew that we were bound to make mistakes; but I also believe that she understood it is better for us to make the mistakes and figure out the right way now in a safe class environment rather than on the job." ♦

The book, Town and Gown: Legal Strategies for Effective Collaboration, co-edited by Cynthia Baker, was published by the American Bar Association. In addition to a chapter written by Professor Baker, the book also includes chapters by alumnae Heather McCabe, '03, and Emily Benfer, '05. Professor Baker also made a presentation to visiting legal scholars and lawyers from Brazil titled "Public Records: Transparency & Democracy in Our Digital Age." The guests were from law schools in Espirito Santo, Brazil, who visited IU McKinney in September.

Professor Baker also taught a class during the Law School for Legislators program, sponsored by the Indiana State Bar Association, and held at the Indiana State House on November 18. The class involved an exploration of an area of Indiana law, a group exercise based on a hypothetical, with the legislators in the role of various lawyers and clients, and then a discussion about law's possibilities, limits, and opportunities for change.

Professor Baker also hosted the 2013 Program on Law and State Government Fellowship Symposium on September 20. The event, titled "State Governments Face the Realities of Aging Populations," was organized by PLSG Fellows Tarah M.C. Baldwin and Sean Deneault.

Shawn Boyne has been named to the Finance Committee of the American Society of Comparative Law. Her book, entitled, The German Prosecution Service: Guardians of the Law? was released on November 15, and is currently available through Amazon. The book is based on three years of field research in Germany and explores the question of whether German prosecutors live up to their billing as "the most objective prosecutors in the world." In the classroom this semester, Professor Boyne has reprised her criminal law advocacy skills course, which is designed to hone students' oral advocacy skills at the trial court level.

Karen Bravo will become Associate Dean for Graduate Studies & International Affairs on January 1, 2014. Jim Nehf will step down as Associate Dean for Graduate Studies at the end of 2013, and Bravo will increase her role in the leadership of the law school. In her new position, she will oversee IU McKinney's LL.M. and S.J.D. programs while continuing to coordinate the international and comparative law initiatives.

Professor Bravo participated in the 2013 HERS Bryn Mawr Institute June 22 - July 5 at Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania. The Higher Education Resource Services (HERS) is an educational non-profit organization providing leadership and management development for women in higher education administration. She also took part in the conference "Business and Human Rights: Moving Forward, Looking Back," held September 23 and 24, at the University of West Virginia College of Law. The conference is believed to be the first of its kind in the United States, drawing academics and practitioners from around the world. The event was the product of a University of West Virginia competitive grant program, and was supported by the UN Working Group on Business and Human Rights. Professor Bravo also chaired and moderated the panel "Teaching International Law Outside Law Schools" during the 2013 International Law Weekend, October 25 and 26, at Fordham Law School in New York City.

Jennifer Drobac's latest article, "Wake Up and Smell the Starbucks Coffee: How Doe v. Starbucks Confirms the End of the 'Age of Consent' in California and Perhaps Beyond," published in 2013, serves as the lead article in Volume 33 of the BOSTON COLLEGE JOURNAL OF LAW AND SOCIAL JUSTICE (33 B.C. J.L. & SOC. JUST. 1 (2013)). Professor Drobac also served as a discussion panelist during the October 4, 2013, Hall Center for Law & Health Conference "Will Neuroscience Redefine Mental Injury?" Additionally, she presented her work on "Legal Catalysis" at the Gruter Institute for Law & Behavioral Research Annual Conference in Squaw Valley on May 21, 2013.

George E. Edwards made a virtual global presentation on September 4, 2013, titled "Rights of LGBT International Students Enrolled in U.S. Colleges and Universities: International Human Rights Law, U.S. Federal Law, and State and Local Law Protections." The talk was part of the EducationUSA Global LGBT Virtual College Fair – LGBT International Students in U.S. Educational Institutions. This event was sponsored and facilitated by EducationUSA – U.S. Department of State Affiliate; U.S. Embassy—Tokyo; EducationUSA Northeast Asia and Pacific and Southeast Asia. He also delivered lectures titled "L.L.M. Student Survival & Empowerment: Tools To Help You Reach Your Master of Laws Academic, Personal & Career Goals During Your LL.M. Year and Beyond," "Capturing Prospective Employers' Attention by Connecting the Dots: The LL.M. Cover Letter," and "How Master of Laws Students Might Best Present their Credentials to Prospective Employers in the U.S. and Overseas Public and Private Sectors: The LL.M. Resume," during the inaugural BARBRI LL.M. Preview on August 8 in New York City.

Professor Edwards also traveled to Tbilisi, Republic of Georgia, to present "U.S. Master of Laws & Other Law Programs: What Georgian Students Want To Know About U.S. Law Study" at Tbilisi State University. The presentation, made on June 17, was co-sponsored

IU McKinney Faculty, Alumnus Take Part in Guantanamo Discussion

PUI Cultural Arts Gallery. Justice David was the chief defense counsel to the Office of Military Commissions from 2007 to 2010. He oversaw the defense team for post-9/11 detainees in Guantanamo. Kammen is the civilian learned counsel responsible for defending Abd al-Rahim Al-Nashiri, who is accused of masterminding the 2000 bombing of the USS Cole.

by the European Law Students Association Tbilisi, the European Law Students Association Georgia, and the GLCC Law Firm of Tbilisi. Also at the university, he presented the talk titled "Do You Want to Study Law in the U.S.A.? A Georgian Student's Guide to U.S. Master of Laws and Other Law Degree Programs" on June 18, and "Opportunities for Georgian Students to Study Law in the U.S.A.: An Introduction to U.S. Master of Law, Juris Doctor, and Doctor of Juridical Sciences Degree Programs," on June 21.

Professor Edwards also traveled to Yerevan, Armenia to present the talk titled "Do You Want to Study Law in the U.S.A.? An Armenian Student's Guide to U.S. Master of Laws and Other Law Degree Programs" at the EducationUSA Advising Center on June 20.

During August, Professor Edwards took part in meetings and discussions at United Nations facilities in New York, at The Hague in The Netherlands, and in Bangkok, Thailand, furthering Program in International Human Rights Law projects and consulting per the United Nations Special Consultative Status that was granted to the PIHRL in 2011. He also took part in U.S. Embassy meetings in Tokyo, Japan, and in Bangkok, Thailand, where he talked about LL.M. program enrollment for Japanese and Thai students, U.S. legal education, international LL.M. students sitting for the bar exam in U.S. jurisdictions, and internationally recognized rights of international students in the U.S.

Frank Emmert, the John S. Grimes Professor of Law and Director of the Center for International and Comparative Law, made a presentation on "Corporate Social Responsibility — Quo Vadis?" at a conference on "Corporate Social Responsibility in the Middle East" organized by the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies in Istanbul, Turkey, on June 19 and 20. Together with other presentations of the conference, the paper will be published in a book by the Council on International Law and Politics (www.cilpnet.org) toward the end of the year. On October 8, Professor Emmert made a presentation on “Law and Politics in Post-Revolutionary Egypt” at a panel organized by Texas A&M University School of Law in Fort Worth. Later that same day, he spoke at Southern Methodist University School of Law in Dallas on “What’s Next for Egypt—Notes from the Ground.” During the week of November 4-8, Professor Emmert was one of the keynote speakers at a conference on “Contratación y Tratados de Libre Comercio” organized by Universidad Santo Tomás first on their main campus in Bogotá and then on their branch campuses in Medellín and Bucaramanga, in Colombia. His topic was “The Strengths and Weaknesses of Colombia and Other Latin American States as Destinations for Foreign Investment and Partners for International Business Transactions.” On November 23, 2013, Professor Emmert was in Egypt for the commencement ceremony celebrating the completion of the fifth cohort of students in the IU McKinney LL.M. Program at Cairo University. Since U.S. government aid for Egypt is currently on hold in Washington, after the military deposed President Morsi in July, the future of this program is uncertain and this may be the last graduation we celebrate in Cairo. To maintain the deep and highly successful involvement of the law school in the Middle East, Professor Emmert and the leadership team of McKinney are working on a proposal to open a similar program in Lebanon in 2014. On November 25 and 26, Professor Emmert participated at a conference on “Legal Ethics and Professional Responsibility” in Oslo, Norway, and presented his comparative research on codes of conduct for judges and arbitrators toward the development of a model law. In addition to these presentations and regular teaching at McKinney, Professor Emmert has been working on an evaluation of “Ten Years of International Promotion of Rule of Law in Kosovo” for the European Union and articles on corporate social responsibility and an economic analysis of Islamic law.

Robert Katz’s article “Sustainable Business” (co-written with Vice Dean Antony Page) was published in the EMORY LAW JOURNAL. Professor Katz presented a work-in-progress on the Affordable Care Act’s impact on tax-exempt hospitals to McKinney colleagues at a Faculty Colloquium on October 24, and to nonprofit scholars at the annual conference of ARNOVA, the Association for Research on Nonprofit Organizations and Voluntary Action, held in Hartford, Connecticut on November 24. Also at the ARNOVA conference, Professor Katz participated in a colloquy on how social enterprise challenges the legal boundaries of the nonprofit sector, and he moderated a panel discussion on “Navigating the Nonprofit Legal Regime, or Gaming It?” On November 1, Professor Katz participated in a panel discussion on “Donor Intent vs. Public Interest: The Barnes Collection and The Art of the Steal.” This panel was held in the Wynne Courtroom as part of the Annual Jordan H. and Joan R. Leibman Forum on the Legal and Business Environment of Art.

During September, Professor and Dean Emeritus Norman Lefstein was a panelist at a briefing at the Rayburn House Office Building in Washington, D.C., on the subject of the federal indigent defense crisis. The program was titled, “Chipping Away at the Sixth Amendment.” Also during September, he published an op-ed in the online edition of The Hill titled, “The Essential Role of Private Lawyers in Defending the Poor.” In October, he addressed an advisory panel and Texas government officials in Austin on the subject of “Understanding and Evaluating Public Defense Caseloads.” Meanwhile, he continues to serve as an expert witness in litigation dealing with problems in indigent defense representation. During September, he completed work on a habeas corpus death penalty case in Arizona. Pending cases include lawsuits in a Pennsylvania county and a New York class action case, which challenges the system of defense representation in that State.

Catherine Lemmer, Head of Library Information Services (with Hannah Alcasid, Circulation Senior Assistant) published “RLLL Mobile Turns One: Reflections on how we developed a library mobile site from the ground up” in AALL Spectrum, June 2013, at 14-16, 35.

Her article, “A view from the flip side: Using the ‘inverted classroom’ to enhance the legal information literacy of the international LL.M. student,” 105:4 LAW LIBR. J. 461(2013) won the 2013 AALL/LexisNexis Call for Papers Award in the new members division. The award was presented at the American Association of Law Libraries Annual Meeting and Conference, in Seattle, Washington in July 2013.

In July 2013, she became Editorial Director of the AALL Spectrum®, the monthly journal of the American Association of Law Libraries.

She also presented “Legal Information Literacy in the 21st Century,” as an invited presenter for the statewide Indiana State Library 21st Century Literacy Days, August 1, 9, and 16; “Don’t Assume the Peanut Butter is in the Pantry!: Demystifying Project Management,” (a half-day workshop) at the American Association of Law Libraries Annual Conference, in Seattle, Washington in July 2013; “Step Away from Click Here!: Using Problem Based Learning to Develop Informed Learners,” at Indiana University

Faculty News

Librarians' Day, in Indianapolis, Indiana, on June 7; and "21st Century Literacy: An Introduction to Legal Information Literacy for Non-Law Librarians," at the Institutional Librarians of Indiana Spring Workshop in Indianapolis, Indiana, on May 13.

Professor Lemmer was chosen as a Senior Fellow to work with the Legal Resources Centre of South Africa in Johannesburg, Gauteng, South Africa. She left in September to spend six months working with the LRC staff to develop, organize, and begin implementing plans to modernize their library and research operations to better support the work of the LRC lawyers. In this role she will organize the collections, develop policies, and procure the technology lawyers get accustomed to using in law school and require for practicing law. In addition, she will negotiate with technological infrastructure and legal resource vendors and help LRC staff redesign their libraries, with the goal of making them efficient and modern.

The LRC is South Africa's largest and oldest national public interest law organization. Since 1979 the LRC has been working on behalf of the most vulnerable populations in the areas of land and housing rights, children's rights and education, environmental justice, HIV/AIDS, health and other social services, refugee matters, and women's equality.

The LRC is the leading public interest law firm pursuing constitutional litigation in the South African courts. Nelson Mandela appointed LRC's founder, Arthur Chaskalson, to serve as the first President of South Africa's Constitutional Court in 1994. Janet Love is the National Director of the LRC. She has been a part of the anti-apartheid movement since 1974. She spent 10 years in exile and worked inside South Africa as a member of the African National Congress underground. She is a Commissioner of the South African Human Rights Commission.

The LRC library is named in honor of Bram Fischer, a key figure in the anti-apartheid fight. A South African lawyer of Afrikaner descent, he was, among other things, the lead defense attorney for Nelson Mandela and other anti-apartheid activists arrested at Liliesleaf Farm in 1964. Many believe it is due to his work that the activists received life sentences rather than the death penalty.

Professor Lemmer plans to keep her colleagues updated on her progress at the LRC through her blog at rightangleresume.blogspot.com and via Twitter (@catherine.lemmer).

tions on the book at Ohio State and at the National Constitution Center, the latter of which aired on C-Span2 in October. Also in October, Professor Magliocca took part in a National Public Radio program titled "Your Weekly Constitutional," where he spoke about his book. His op-ed on the Affordable Care Act, entitled "Why Obamacare is Not 'Settled,'" appeared in the Washington Post on October 3 and his opinion piece titled "The Father of the Fourteenth Amendment" was published online on September 17 on the New York Times Opinionator page as part of the series Disunion, which is about the Civil War.

Allison Martin was reappointed to the ABA Commission on Lawyers Assistance Programs Advisory Committee and its Law School Assistance Subcommittee. In September, she attended the Central States Region Legal Writing Conference held at the University of Kansas School of Law and presented, "Peer to Peer Learning: Encouraging It in Advanced Legal Writing Courses." In November, her article, "Six Tips for Writing Effective Demand Letters," was published in Res Gestae, the journal of the Indiana State Bar Association, as her first contribution to the McKinney Law legal writing program's new column, "WordWise."

Emily Michiko Morris presented her research "Nanotechnology as Nascent Technology: Potential Patent Issues," at the Sage Handbook of Intellectual Property Symposium, held in Durham, UK, June 29-30. She also participated in the Intellectual Property Scholars Conference held at the Cardozo School of Law, Yeshiva University, New York City, in August, where she presented her research project entitled "Optimal (Un)Certainty in Patent Claims." In addition, Professor Morris was among the presenters at the New York State Bar Association Antitrust Law Section Fall Antitrust Symposium titled "The Actavis and Myriad Genetics Decisions: Is Competition Policy Trumping IP Protection at the Supreme Court?" on October 30 at the Harvard Club in New York City.

David Orentlicher's most recent book, Two Presidents Are Better than One: The Case for a Bipartisan Executive Branch, was recently published by NYU Press. His work has been featured on C-SPAN's BookTV, NPR.org, and reviewed in The Weekly Standard, Boston Globe, Chicago Tribune and Washington Post. He has engaged in numerous public presentations of his work, including presentations at Marquette University Law School on November 5, Texas A&M University Department of Political Science on November 1, Case Western Reserve University School of Law on October 15, University of North Carolina School of Law on October 2, University of Kentucky College of Law on September 27, the American Political Science Association Annual Meeting on August 30, and University Book Store in Seattle, Washington on July 17.

Professor Orentlicher has also published the eighth edition of the casebook Health Care Law and Ethics (8th ed., Wolters Kluwer 2013) with his co-editors, Mark A. Hall and Mary Anne Bobinski, and the third edition of his casebook Bioethics and Public Health (3rd ed., Wolters Kluwer 2013), also co-edited by Hall and Bobinski, was published in May. His book chapter "Principle and Practice for Palliative Sedation: Gaps between the Two," appears in Continuous Sedation at the End of Life: Clinical, Legal and Ethical Aspects 116-131 (Sterckx, Raus and Mortier eds., Cambridge University Press 2013). Other recently published scholarship by Professor Orentlicher includes "The FDA's Graphic Tobacco Warnings and the First Amendment," 369 NEW ENGLAND JOURNAL OF MEDICINE 204-206 (2013), and "Deactivating Implanted Cardiac Devices: Euthanasia or the Withdrawal of Treatment?" 39 WILLIAM MITCHELL LAW REVIEW 1287-1294 (2013) (part of symposium issue on medical device law).

Professor Orentlicher has contributed to the ongoing discussion about the appropriate response to the issue of concussions sustained by professional football players. His article "Concussion and Football: Failures to Respond by the NFL and the Medical Profession," co-authored with William S. David, appeared as part of a symposium issue on NFL concussion litigation at 8 FIU Law Review 17-30 (2013). He also presented this research to the ASLME Annual Health Law Professors Conference, which was held at Seton Hall University School of Law on June 8. In October, Professor Orentlicher made the following presentations, "Health Care Reform and Efforts to Encourage Healthy Behavior by Individuals" at the North Carolina Law Review Symposium on Health Care Decision Making, at the University of North Carolina School of Law, on October 4, and "Implementation of the Affordable Care Act" at the Houston Law Review Symposium on the Affordable Care Act, University of Houston Law Center, on October 31.

Fran Quigley published multiple articles about service-sector unionism and the need for an increase in the minimum wage. ## Mark Shaw, '72, Publishes Book on Kennedy Assassination

Mark Shaw, '72, recently published his 25th book, The Poison Patriarch: How the Betrayals of Joseph P. Kennedy Caused the Assassination of JFK. In the book, Shaw examines the question of who is responsible for the death of the president and finds a trail that leads to the head of the family, Joseph P. Kennedy. Shaw's research includes more than 40 interviews with eyewitnesses to those events in Dallas 50 years ago.

Shaw's background includes six years as a criminal defense attorney in Indiana. He also practiced entertainment law in Los Angeles and Indianapolis. In 2008, he earned a master's degree in theological studies from the San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, California. Shaw remains a member of the bar in California and Indiana. He also is a legal analyst for ABC, ESPN, and USA Today.

Alumni Wed at Inlow Hall

On Sunday, October 13, two alumni exchanged wedding vows in the Harold R. Woodard Room of the Ruth Lilly Law Library at Inlow Hall. The wedding of Melissa Stuart, '11 and Matthew Keyes, '10, was officiated by Neal Eggeson, a former McKinney Law adjunct professor. Stuart and Keyes met in Eggeson's LARC 3 class in the fall semester of 2009. The occasion marked the first time alumni have been married at Inlow Hall.

Professor Emeritus Harold Greenberg

Harold Greenberg passed away on October 15, 2013. He was a professor of law at IU McKinney from 1977 to 2011. He received his A.B. degree summa cum laude from Temple University in 1959 and his J.D. magna cum laude from the University of Pennsylvania in 1962. He clerked for Justice Samuel J. Roberts of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania for almost two years before practicing law in Philadelphia for 12 years. After joining the faculty of IU, he served as director of the law school's European Law Summer Program in Lille, France for several summers and was a visiting professor of law at Jacksonville, Florida and Chicago, Illinois.

While on sabbatical in 1987, he served as visiting guest expert on the Uniform Commercial Code at the Center for Commercial Law Studies, Queen Mary College, University of London. He was the author of Rights and Remedies Under U.C.C. Article 2. A member of the ABA and ISBA, he taught Contracts, Sales, Commercial Paper, Sports and Entertainment Law, and the European Legal System. He is remembered by faculty and alumni as a dedicated colleague and mentor who influenced many students through Moot Court and the Sports and Entertainment Law Society. He had a passion for theater that led him to serve for many years on the board of directors of Footlite Musicals in Indianapolis where he helped produce over 30 musicals.

Todd E. Hassee, '12

Todd E. Hassee passed away on July 15, 2013. A native of Evansville, Indiana, he attended the University of Southern Indiana where he studied business. After moving to Indianapolis, he worked for Roche Pharmaceuticals before attending law school and graduating in 2012. After law school he worked for the Indiana Department of Revenue as well as Do317, a musical event promotion company in Indianapolis. A Celebration of Todd's Life was held on July 20, 2013 during which he was remembered as a sports and travel enthusiast and animal lover who cared deeply for friends, family and the community at large. While in law school he was chosen as an Albert Schweitzer Fellow for life, making him one of only 2,000 individuals, nationwide, skilled in, and committed to, addressing the health needs of underserved people. As part of his ASF work, he helped to establish the IU Student Outreach Clinic, a medical-legal partnership that includes a free clinic and other legal and social services for needy communities.

James F. T. Sargent, '61

James F. T. Sargent, Jr., 76, passed away on Friday, March 29, 2013 at his residence in Greenwood, Indiana. He was born on June 2, 1936 in Indianapolis, Indiana to James F. T. Sargent, Sr. and Elta (Moody) Sargent. Jim graduated from Hanover College, where he played football and was pledged to the Lambda Chi Fraternity. Jim received his J.D. from the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law in 1961 and practiced a short time with his father at the law firm of Sargent and Sargent. In 1962, Jim was a deputy prosecutor for Marion County. He moved to Greenwood in 1963. In 1969, Jim was appointed judge of Greenwood City Court by Governor Roger D. Branigan. Jim devoted most of his career to private practice. He also provided mediation services with his partner, Jack Smart, at Southside Mediation. Jim achieved the preeminent AV rating for his exceptional level of expertise and knowledge in the practice of law. Since 1987, he was in partnership with his wife, Linda Meier Sargent, '87, at the law firm of Sargent and Meier in Greenwood. Jim was a founding committee member of the Greenwood Police Merit Commission. He had served as a presidential appointee and district representative to the Indiana Continuing Education Foundation Board of Directors, and also lectured for ICLEF programs. In 2010, Jim served as a delegate to the Indiana Republican State Convention. In 2011, Jim was honored with the Golden Career Award for fifty years in the practice of law. He was a member of the Indiana State Bar Association, Indianapolis Bar Association and the Johnson County Bar Association. He was licensed to practice in the State of Indiana and in the Southern and Northern Federal Districts in Indiana. Jim was a member of Emmanuel Church of Greenwood at Stones Crossing. He loved gardening, fishing and traveling.

McKinney Law at Victory Field

On August 30, the McKinney Law Alumni Association sponsored a program, "It's a Family Affair at Victory Field with Dean Andy Klein" at Victory Field in Indianapolis. McKinney Law students, alumni, faculty and staff were on hand to cheer on the Indianapolis Indians, and Dean Klein threw out the ceremonial first pitch. McKinney Law families enjoyed a picnic dinner prior to the game between the Indians and the Louisville Bats.

Dean's Report 2012-2013

The Dean's Report recognizes the generous alumni and friends who have supported the IU McKinney School of Law financially during fiscal year 2012-2013. Donors to the law school are recognized in several ways, including membership in a variety of giving societies, including the Landmark Society, the Century Society, the Black Cane Society, and the Maennerchor Society, all carrying the Partners in Progress giving designation. Other giving societies include the Dean's Council, and the Law School Associates, along with the Harrison Society that honors the school's highest levels of cumulative lifetime giving, and the Legacy Society, recognizing those benefactors who have made a provision to benefit the law school through their estate plans or other planned gifts.

Giving highlights from the 2012-2013 fiscal year include:

- 1,791 donors made a gift to the law school, and of that number, 995 were alumni.
- $1,826,043 in total development productivity calculated as dollars raised, which includes outright gifts received, matching gifts received, and new pledges documented, in addition to non-governmental grants and documented deferred gift commitments.
- $1,124,477 in dollars raised, which includes outright gifts received, matching gifts received, and new pledges documented.
- $1,393,038 in dollars received, which includes outright gifts received, matching gifts received, and payments on pledges made in prior fiscal years.
- 196 donors contributed at the Partners in Progress level of $1,000 or more to the law school during the fiscal year.
- 49% of the law school faculty and staff contributed to the law school.

IUPUI's IMPACT Campaign Results Are In!

“We are extremely grateful for the generosity of our many benefactors who supported the IU McKinney School of Law in this campaign, and the volunteer leaders who helped secure that support.”

Dean Andrew R. Klein

The seven-year IUPUI IMPACT Campaign officially came to a close at the end of March 2013, raising more than $1.395 billion from nearly 100,000 donors to support the university's higher education mission. A celebratory event was held in September, hosted by IU President Michael A. McRobbie, IUPUI Chancellor and IU Executive Vice President Charles R. Bantz, and IU Foundation President and CEO Dan Smith. A number of current students were on hand to join in the celebration.

“We are extremely grateful for the generosity of our many benefactors who supported the IU McKinney School of Law in this campaign, and the volunteer leaders who helped secure that support,” Dean Andrew R. Klein said. “The many commitments to support new and existing endowment funds for scholarships, faculty teaching and research, and program enhancement will significantly advance the law school's ability to impact the lives of our students. The support of our alumni and friends—from Bob McKinney's landmark gift to the many annual gifts that are made each year—truly inspires and enables our law school community to reach for even greater accomplishments.” Dean Klein continued, “The fact that our supporters demonstrated such generosity—particularly during a period of economic challenge—is a testament to the belief that so many people have in our mission and what this law school does to benefit our profession and communities throughout Indiana and across the nation.”

Overall, the gifts and gift commitments our generous donors have made to the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law during the IUPUI IMPACT Campaign will have lasting impact for our students and result in the following:

Six Endowed Chairs, designed to help the law school attract cutting-edge scholar-teachers for our students.

- Gerald L. Bepko Endowed Chair
- Lawrence A. Jegen III Chair in Tax Law
- John L. Krauss Chair in Alternative Dispute Resolution
- Robert H. McKinney Family Chair in Environmental Law

Steve Tuchman, '71
Establishes Scholarship

Inspired by work being done on a national level to support the education of LGBT youth whose families have turned their backs on them, Steve Tuchman, '71, and his partner of 27 years, Reed Bobrick, were motivated to make a $100,000 gift commitment to the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law. With this in mind, they have created the Tuchman Bobrick Scholarship, with preference that the scholarship be awarded to a self-identified gay male at the school.

Tuchman is a director at Lewis & Kappes, P.C. in downtown Indianapolis, where he is widely known for his concentration in immigration and nationality law, with additional experience in real estate, corporate and business law. Bobrick is a co-owner of Misch Bobrick Design, an architectural and interior design firm in Indianapolis with clients throughout the state and across the nation.

Tuchman's interest in international matters stems from early in his legal career. He took a summer course in London for law school and made friends with fellow law students from Denmark. Those friendships resulted in an opportunity for Tuchman to live there for a couple of years once he completed law school, after passing the bar exam in Indiana.

"Nobody was pounding at my doorstep to hire me at that time, and my interest in being an associate at a law firm in downtown Indianapolis then was not great," Tuchman said. "Living and working in Denmark, learning the Danish Culture, turned out to be the adventure of a lifetime."

He learned the language and made lifelong friends, who have kept Tuchman in mind as they moved up the ranks in Danish government and business. Tuchman serves as the Danish Consul for Indiana and Kentucky, and he was knighted by Queen Margrethe II in December 2012 for his meritorious service to Denmark.

Higher education has played a critical role in both their lives, they said.

"I think Reed has acquired some understanding that for as much as I said I hated law school," Tuchman said with a chuckle, "he understands how important it has been in my life."

Tuchman and Bobrick were motivated to support the law school with a planned gift because of their support for another organization: The POINT Foundation. The foundation was created in 2001 to help students who identify as lesbian, gay, bisexual, or transgendered achieve their goals of higher education. Students turn to the foundation because their families are unable or unwilling to support them because of their orientation. In addition to financial support, the foundation also provides mentors to the students, matching them with someone who is successful in the field they want to pursue.

Tuchman is a longtime friend of the law school, participating in a variety of events and programs, serving as a current Board of Visitors member, and getting to know students and other alumni. At the new student orientation at the law school in 2012, he met a student who made quite an impression on him.

"It was totally random, but I had an opportunity to meet a new student who without any hesitation whatsoever identified himself as gay," Tuchman said. "It was really an acknowledgment that a lot has happened since I started law school in the old Maennerchor building."

"It wouldn't have been the first thing you would have said to someone back then," Bobrick agreed.

Working Harder and Smarter

By Lisa Puga

For a busy attorney like Linda Pence, '74, finding time to volunteer for your alma mater might be difficult—but she's never been one to shy away from hard work.

---

Linda Pence—who worked her way through law school—thinks that working students today have an even tougher road than she did. Her understanding of the obstacles they face is part of what inspired her to help fund a scholarship for law students.

"Fewer full-time employment opportunities, diminishing state aid, higher tuition, the rising cost of living: These are challenges I didn't have," she observes.

Still, her road wasn't easy.

Trial by Choice

For two years during law school, Linda, BA'71, JD'74, was employed as a full-time Marion County caseworker. On any given day, she might deal with a mother being arrested, a custody dispute, or some other devastating family issue.

At 5 p.m., she went to class at what is now known as the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law. "It was the only law school that offered evening classes at the time," she says. "I don't think I would be a lawyer today if the school hadn't been there."

Her last class adjourned around 9:30 p.m., capping off a long day of work and study. While others might balk at such a life, Linda focuses on the opportunities it afforded. "I was out in the real world, seeing people's problems firsthand and learning a great deal about the law," she recalls. "At night, I learned legal theory. During the day, I saw it applied."

When she graduated, she was hired by the U.S. Department of Justice. Today, she is a partner at Pence Hensel, LLC, where she specializes in white-collar criminal litigation. "My favorite part of the law is the chance to put together complicated cases and then present them to juries," she says. "I'm always learning, and no two days are ever the same."

Honoring a Lifetime of Good Works

Linda isn't the only IU McKinney Law alum in her family. Her brother, Michael (no relation to the current Indiana governor), graduated in 1979. But it was her late father, Woodrow, who inspired the name of the Pence scholarship.

After retiring from the U.S. Probation Department, Woodrow became the new placement director at the law school. "He just loved that job," recalls Linda. "He was able to help students find professional positions thanks to the lawyers he knew from the probation department."

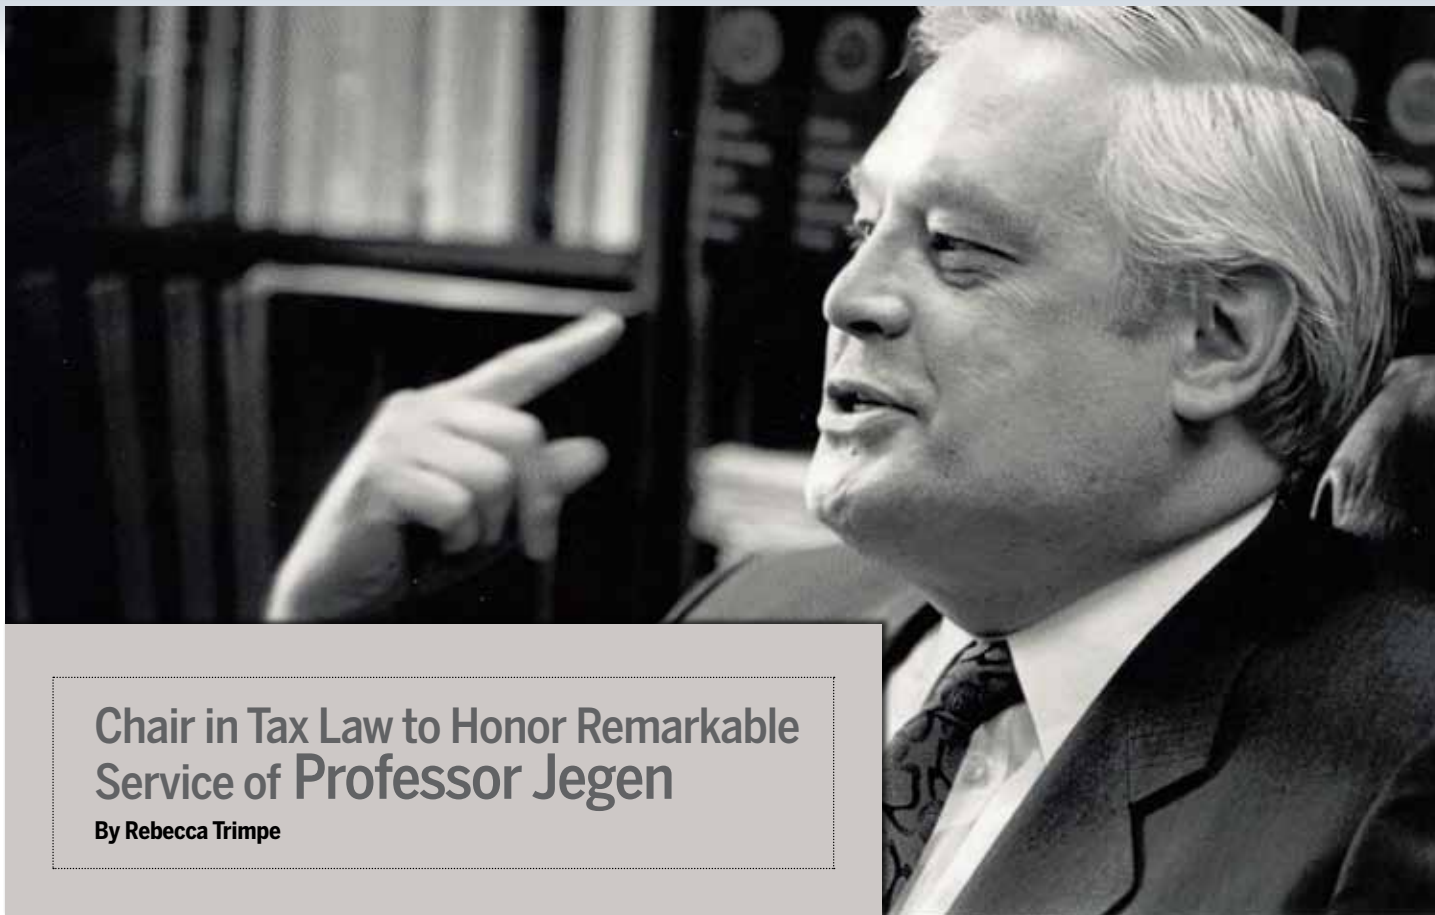

When Woodrow passed away in 1982, Gerald L. Bepko, then dean of the McKinney School, proposed to honor his life and work by creating the Woodrow W. Pence Memorial Scholarship, an idea the Pence family embraced. Over the years, Linda and Michael have made gifts to the scholarship fund, and now, Linda has included the scholarship in plans for her estate.

Still Tireless

Linda's generosity to McKinney goes beyond her financial support: She served as one of the school's co-chairs in the IUPUI IMPACT Campaign. For a busy attorney like Linda, finding time to volunteer for your alma mater might be difficult—but she's never been one to shy away from hard work.

Chair in Tax Law to Honor Remarkable Service of Professor Jegen

By Rebecca Trimpe

Some schools are blessed with that one special professor whom everyone recalls fondly but maybe with the tiniest hint of trepidation.

The Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law has a host of such professors, but one name stands above all: Professor Lawrence A. Jegen III.

In recognition of his distinguished service, the law school created the Lawrence A. Jegen III Chair in Tax Law. The chair will enable the law school to recruit a senior academic in the area of tax law—someone, like professor Jegen, with national stature. The endowed chair also will fund this individual's scholarship and teaching, including travel, research assistance, and guest lectures.

In his 50-plus years of teaching IU McKinney Law students, Professor Jegen's devotion to his subject matter and his students is as evident today as it was when he began his career.

The IU McKinney Law evening division was one of the reasons that Paul Corsaro, '69, returned to Indianapolis for law school, and Professor Jegen is the reason he decided to pursue a practice in trusts and estates. Corsaro is a partner in Ice Miller's trusts and estates practice group.

"I had thought I wanted to be an accountant instead of a lawyer," Corsaro said. "But Larry's enthusiasm for the law propelled me. He would be so engaged by teaching that he sometimes lost track of when class ended. He was a wonderful role model. I figured that was the way to live your life, with that kind of enthusiasm."

Professor Jegen's teaching method was novel at the time, Corsaro said. "I really loved the way he taught. Once you were through with his class, you had learned a lot. His teaching method is great."

Motivated by a desire to cut back on his work at an Indianapolis law firm to focus more on teaching, and a desire to help students launch their careers, Corsaro said Professor Jegen recommended some of his students for jobs at his firm. Corsaro was one of the students hired as a result of Professor Jegen's influence.

"That positive influence and helping me launch my career is what motivated me to make a gift to the Jegen Chair," Corsaro said.

That desire to see his students succeed and willingness to do all he could to make that happen is what makes Professor Jegen so special, said Curtis Shirley, '91. Shirley has a private practice, focusing primarily on trust and estates litigation.

"Larry's biggest impact for me was his personal support at any time students would call and ask," Shirley said. He clerked for the United States Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit, and worked as a summer associate for IBM in Armonk, New York, neither of which would have happened without Professor Jegen's help, Shirley said.

"He's a very selfless person who has a big heart for doing whatever will help the students the most," Shirley said. "My donation to the Jegen Chair is one way I can say thank you for some of Professor Jegen has made a lasting impact on many of his former and current students—some of whom were compelled to make a gift in his honor to support the Jegen Chair. We are very grateful for those alumni and friends who have already made a gift towards this initiative. Did Professor Jegen have a lasting impact on you? To reach the $1.5 million threshold that will fully fund and endow the Jegen Chair, roughly $350,000 more in private funding is needed—and every gift makes a difference towards this goal. For more information on making a gift to the Jegen Chair, please contact Mark Wunder at 317-274-8147.

what he's done for me and my career."

Shirley also recalls Professor Jegen's teaching methods, recalling that he would address a brand new subject in each class period, expecting students to use their study time to reinforce what he had taught them.

"He would choose a student's name and would utilize the entire time working with that student to make all his points in class," Shirley said. "There was no way to prepare for this. If you didn't back down, he established a rapport with you, and at the end of the semester you knew you had someone who was there to help you. All you had to do was ask."

Students' responses to Professor Jegen's teaching methods also could serve as an indicator as to the kind of law the students would later practice, Shirley said.

"A certain portion of the class enjoyed the back and forth. Those are the ones who ended up being trial lawyers," Shirley said. "If you were comfortable enough to stand your ground in front of Larry Jegen, you were comfortable enough to stand your ground in front of any judges on the federal and state court bench."

Standing her ground in front of Professor Jegen is what Shaun Healy Clifford, '85, recalls the most about Federal Tax class. Clifford is a partner at Faegre Baker Daniels, working on their Insurance Regulatory team. She recalls one instance where Professor Jegen was assigning seats and directed "Mr. Healy" to take his seat. When Clifford, who was unmarried at the time, corrected him, she knew she was in for some interesting times. Professor Jegen didn't disappoint.

"Miss Healy, you look like you're puzzled about this," she recalls Professor Jegen remarking to her in class—and that he wasn't far off the mark. Jegen's Federal Tax class was frustrating for her because she had been an accounting major in her undergraduate career, and had the CPA exam successfully under her belt. She thought she knew everything she needed to know about taxes—certainly more than she wanted to know.

Later in the semester, everything Professor Jegen had been teaching finally clicked for her, and she recalls making an audible intake of breath.

"Professor Jegen responded with 'Miss Healy, to what do I owe this big sucking of wind?'" she said, laughing. "I never took offense to it. I really enjoyed his style. He stripped down everything you thought you knew about taxes and then carefully put it back together. He made us think like lawyers! His commitment to retraining our brains to think like lawyers is one of the primary reasons I was motivated to make a donation to the Jegen Chair."

Professor Jegen Has Distinguished Reputation at IU, Nationwide

Professor Lawrence A. Jegen III, began his academic career in the Maennerchor Building in 1962. In 1982, the Indiana University trustees awarded him the Thomas F. Sheehan Professor of Tax Law and Policy, a title he continues to hold. He is a member of the Faculty of Philanthropic Studies at Indiana University, Center on Philanthropy; Internal Tax Counsel to Indiana University; a representative of Indiana University to the National Association of College and University Attorneys; and a co-founder and co-director of the Annual Tax Institute for Colleges and Universities.

Since he joined the faculty, Professor Jegen has taught in the areas of civil and criminal, federal and state taxation; business and estate planning; and philanthropy. He has been a visiting professor at other law schools, has given lectures at professional institutes to lawyers, accountants, representatives of Congress, to various divisions of the Internal Revenue Service, and to the Indiana Department of State Revenue.

Twice he has received the Thomas Hart Benton Mural Medallion, the highest award granted by Indiana University. Professor Jegen also has received the Presidents Circle Commemorative Medallion for exceptional support of Indiana University; Indiana University's President's Distinguished Teaching Award; Indiana University's Teaching Excellence Recognition Award; Indiana University's Most Outstanding Law Professor Award (the Black Cane Award) six times; Indiana University School of Law Distinguished Alumni Award; four Special Indiana University Law School Alumni Awards; and the Indiana University Trustees Teaching Award.

Professor Roisman Makes Gift Commitment

By Rebecca Trimpe

Professor Florence Wagman Roisman, a long-time champion of public interest law, has made a planned gift to the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law that will benefit students who pursue careers in the public interest.

Her gift will support two programs connected to Equal Justice Works: the Equal Justice Works Professor Florence Wagman Roisman Summer Public Interest Scholarships and the law school's Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP) Endowment. Equal Justice Works (EJW) is a student-run organization dedicated to public service through law and justice. In 2004, EJW launched the Summer Public Interest Scholarship Fund, which was created at the initiative of Emily Benfer, '05, then EJW president. Recipients of these scholarships receive financial support while working during the Summer in unpaid positions in the area of public interest law. The Equal Justice Works Professor Florence Wagman Roisman Summer Public Interest Scholarship Fund was created at IU McKinney Law in recognition of Professor Roisman's receiving the Outstanding Law Faculty Award from the national EJW organization.

"It's very important to help students who want to practice public interest law," Professor Roisman said. "These scholarships enable them to start gaining the kind of experience that will help them in their careers."

Professor Roisman's planned gift also will benefit the Loan Repayment Assistance Program (LRAP) Endowment. The law school's LRAP Endowment was created in 2004 in coordination with Equal Justice Works to assist IU McKinney Law graduates working in public interest law with repaying their student-loan debt.

Professor Roisman has primarily focused her practice, teaching, and writing on low-income housing, homelessness, and housing discrimination and segregation. After service at the Federal Trade Commission and the U.S. Department of Justice Appellate Section of the Civil Division, she joined the staff of the D.C. Neighborhood Legal Services Program, and then the National Housing Law Project. She has taught at Georgetown University Law Center, and the law schools of the University of Maryland, Catholic University, and Widener University, among others. In 2006, she was the J. Skelly Wright Fellow at Yale Law School.

Professor Roisman has received numerous honors for her work in public interest law and for her role in nurturing a public interest law ethic among law students. She has been honored by the ABA's Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants and the National Legal Aid and Defender Association. She also has received the Georgetown University Law Center's Equal Justice Foundation Award for Outstanding Faculty Commitment to Public Interest Law, and the inaugural Equal Justice Works Outstanding Law School Faculty Award. In January 2014, she will receive the Society of American Law Teachers' M. Shanara Gilbert Human Rights Award.

She appreciates the need to support the law school, and to do so in a visible way. She makes annual gifts to the law school generally and to EJW, and thought it important to make a legacy gift as well.

"I am involved in asking others to give to the law school, and it's important for others to see me giving yearly and making planned gifts," Professor Roisman said. "Our law school is extraordinary, and I'm grateful to it. I want to do everything I can to help it flourish."

Presidents Circle Inductees

Four law school alumni were inducted into the 2013 Presidents Circle, a prestigious honor which recognizes philanthropic leaders with cumulative giving of more than $100,000 to Indiana University. Members of the Presidents Circle receive a medallion engraved with their name. The medallions have been struck using metal from the original carillon bells that once rang in the IU Bloomington Student Building. In addition, a plaque in the Indiana Memorial Union displays members' names.

The Honorable Warren Haas, a 1976 magna cum laude graduate of the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law, and his wife, Karen Behnke, live in Marion, Indiana. They received their undergraduate and graduate degrees from Indiana University. Behnke is a self-employed certified public accountant. Judge Haas presides in Grant Superior Court 3.

Charles Oehrle, '68, and his wife Lucinda Jackson Oehrle, are longtime supporters of IU. Prior to his retirement, Charles had a successful career in the insurance industry and in the legal profession. He has been active an active member of the board of directors for the law school's alumni association and a volunteer and supporter of a special campaign to benefit the law school. He also established the Charles R. Oehrle Scholarship at the law school in 1982.

Malcolm "Mick" Tuesley, '73, and his wife, Kathleen Tuesley, were visiting a breast cancer research laboratory at the IU Simon Cancer Center when they asked how much was needed to launch a new project. Upon hearing the answer, they agreed to be the funders. The Tuesleys co-hosted fundraising initiatives and gave personally to support new projects underway in the lab.

Reed Oslan is a 1987 magna cum laude graduate of the law school, who attributes his career success to the education he received at IU McKinney. He was associate editor of the INDIANA LAW REVIEW, and after law school, served as a law clerk for a federal district court judge. For many years, he has been a senior litigation partner with the law firm Kirkland & Ellis in Chicago. He is a member of the law school's Board of Visitors, served on the law school's IMPACT Campaign committee, and received the Spirit of Philanthropy Award in 2013.

Harrison Society 2012-2013 Donors

The law school gratefully acknowledges the members of the Harrison Society, whose cumulative gifts of $100,000 or more have served to keep the school at the forefront of legal education. The society is named in memory of former U.S. President Benjamin Harrison, a trustee of the original Indiana Law School, and namesake of the Benjamin Harrison Law School, both predecessor schools of the law school.

Legacy Society 2012-2013 Donors

The Legacy Society honors individuals who seek to advance legal education at the law school by investing in its future. The society enrolls benefactors who confirm planned or deferred gift arrangements benefiting the law school. When alumni and friends let us know that they have included the school in their estate plans, they are invited to join the Legacy Society.

If you have included our school in your estate plans, please let us know. Doing so will ensure that we understand your wishes and can use your gift exactly as you intend. It also allows the school to make note of your gift as we plan for the future – and finally, and most importantly, it allows us to thank you, honor, and show our appreciation for your generosity. We would like to thank the following members of the Legacy Society.

Recognition of Funds 2012-2013

Established funds at the law school help to support and advance the work of our various centers, programs, and clinics on projects and initiatives that enhance the curriculum for our students, improve the law, understand its complexities, and disseminate a better understanding of the law to those external to the law school. We would like to recognize the following donors for their support of these listed funds.

Birch E. Bayh Annual Lecture

Simon Property Group and friends of Birch E. Bayh created the Birch E. Bayh Annual Lecture Endowment to support an annual lecture at the law school in honor of the former U.S. Senator. The lecture series focuses on issues of importance to Senator Bayh throughout his long and distinguished career in government.

Eugene N. and Marian C. Beesley Fund

The Eugene N. and Marian C. Beesley Fund was established in 1973 to support the Ruth Lilly Law Library. Mr. Beesley served as president and board chairman of Eli Lilly and Company. He was the first non-Lilly family member to serve as president. Income from the fund is used to finance acquisitions for the law library.

Ona Chambers Fund

This fund was established in 1974 by the Ona Chambers Trust. Income from this gift is used to purchase art for display at the law school.

Alan and Linda Cohen Family Foundation Sports and Entertainment Law Fund

This fund was established in 2011 by the Alan and Linda Cohen Family Foundation, on behalf of Alan H., '73, and Linda M. Cohen, and their daughter Lauren Cohen Edmundson, '05. The fund supports sports and entertainment law programming at the law school.

Faegre Baker Daniels LLP Public Interest Law Fund

The Faegre Baker Daniels LLP Public Interest Law Fund was established to promote pro bono, clinic, and diversity efforts at the IU Robert H. McKinney School of Law. Faegre Baker Daniels Public Interest Fellows work with clinical faculty in the Civil Practice, Disability, and Criminal Clinics and with the Innocence Project.

Hall Render Fund for Excellence in the William S. and Christine S. Hall Center for Law and Health

Hall, Render, Killian, Heath & Lyman, P.C. established the Hall Render Fund for Excellence in the William S. and Christine S. Center for Law and Health in 2011 for general support of the Hall Center for Law and Health at the law school.

International Law Indianapolis

This fund was established in 1992 by Swadesh S. Kalsi, retired Senior Counsel of Krieg DeVault and long-time adjunct professor at the law school. The fund supports the study of international law.

Timothy J. Kennedy Memorial Moot Court Fund

This fund was created in 2011 by Montross Miller Muller Mendelson & Kennedy in memory of their partner, colleague, and friend of more than 30 years, Timothy J. Kennedy. The fund helps to support the National Professional Responsibility Moot Court Competition hosted by the law school.

Ted B. Lewis Memorial Fund

The Ted B. Lewis Memorial Fund was created in 1991 by Stephen B. Lewis, Kurt W. Lewis, and other friends, family, and colleagues of Ted B. Lewis, '49, principal partner at Lewis & Kappes, formerly known as Lewis Kappes Fuller & Eads. Income from the endowment is used to improve the training of law students in fundamental lawyering skills, supporting programs such as Moot Court, Client Counseling, Legal Writing, and Clinical Education.

Joseph Maley Memorial Fund

In 2010, the Joseph Maley Foundation established the Joseph Maley Memorial Fund at the law school to support general efforts of the Disability Law Clinic, and in particular, the Clinic's role in serving children.

Barry L. Meadow Endowment Fund

This endowment was established in 1992 by Barry L. Meadow, '75, and is used at the discretion of the Dean to benefit students, faculty, and programs at the law school.

Mark and Stacey Roesler Intellectual Property Law and Innovation Center Fund

This endowed fund was established in 2011 by Mark R. Roesler, '82, and Stacey Whitmore-Roesler to support efforts of the law school's Intellectual Property Law and Innovation Center.

Robert H. Staton Intramural Moot Court Competition

Friends of the late Hon. Robert H. Staton, '55, established an endowment in 2005 to honor their longtime friend and alum of the law school. The fund supports the annual Hon. Robert H. Staton Intramural Moot Court Competition at the law school.

James P. White Endowed Lectureship in Legal Education

In 2002, James P. White and his friends funded an endowment to establish the James P. White Endowed Lectureship in Legal Education. Professor White served as Consultant on Legal Education to the American Bar Association for 26 years and is a professor with the law school. Income from the fund supports an annual lecture in legal education at the law school.

James H. and Joan A. Voyles Law Clinic Fund

James H., '68, and Joan A. Voyles established this endowment in 2008 to support the law school's Clinic with preference given to the Criminal Defense Clinic and other clinic activities which involve law students experiencing criminal defense work and representation of clients.

Reed Oslan, '87, Receives Spirit of Philanthropy Award

Reed S. Oslan, '87, received the Spirit of Philanthropy Award at IUPUI during the annual awards luncheon and celebration on April 2, 2013. Oslan was honored for his commitment, generosity and service to the Indiana University Robert H. McKinney School of Law. He is a magna cum laude graduate of the school, where he also served as associate editor of the INDIANA LAW REVIEW. He has been a member of the law school's Board of Visitors since 2008 and also served on the school's IMPACT campaign committee. His advocacy for the school is exemplified by his dedicated philanthropic effort, through his own giving and volunteerism, as well as motivating others to follow his lead. Oslan is a partner in the Chicago office of the law firm Kirkland & Ellis, and has experience in litigation handling environmental, commercial, transactional, and international disputes. He focuses primarily on venture capital-related disputes and litigating in bankruptcy proceedings.

Professorships 2012-2013

Professorships allow the law school to attract and retain a faculty of highly recognized scholars and teachers. We would like to recognize the following donors for their steadfast support. The following pages list our professorships for the 2012-2013 academic year and the respective professorship holders.

Paul E. Beam Professor of Law

The Paul E. Beam Professorship is made possible by a gift to the law school from the estate of the late Paul E. Beam, Sr., '21. In addition to serving as an adjunct faculty member, Mr. Beam was an Indianapolis attorney who served as general counsel to the Indiana State Bar Association for many years.

◀ Dean Andrew R. Klein

John S. Grimes Professor of Law

The John S. Grimes Professorship is made possible thanks to a bequest from the estate of Mr. John S. Grimes. Mr. Grimes was a Professor Emeritus of the law school who taught Property and Trusts and Estates.

◀ Professor Frank Emmert

Gerald L. Bepko Professor of Law

In 2007, a professorship reserved for the dean (or former dean) of the law school was spearheaded by, and ultimately named for, Gerald L. Bepko. Bepko is Chancellor Emeritus of IUPUI, as well as a former professor and dean of the law school whose reputation for administrative excellence will benefit the law school community for generations to come.

◀ Dean Gary R. Roberts

Hall Render Professor of Law

The Hall, Render, Killian, Heath & Lyman Professorship was made possible by a generous gift to the law school from the late William S., '51, and Christine S. Hall. Mr. Hall founded the firm that is the namesake of this endowed professorship in 1967. The firm has focused its practice on health law and is now recognized as one of the nation's preeminent health law firms.

◀ Professor Nicolas P. Terry

Centennial Professor of Law

The Centennial Professorship is the name given to this professorship in recognition of the rich history of the law school, spanning more than one hundred years, and tracing its origin to the Indiana Law School, established in 1894.

◀ Professor Emeritus Paul N. Cox

William F. Harvey Professor of Law

The William F. Harvey Professorship was established by Michael D. McCormick, '80. The former general counsel of Bindley Western Industries and long-time supporter of the law school funded two endowed professorships with his generous gift.

◀ Professor Florence Wagman Roisman

Carl M. Gray Professor of Law

The Carl M. Gray Professorship is named for the late Mr. Gray, a Petersburg, Indiana attorney who made a gift in 1978 to support programs at the law school. Mr. Gray, a former trustee of Indiana University, was recognized during his lifetime for distinguished service by both the Indiana and American Bar Associations.

Professorships 2012-2013

Lawrence A. Jegen III Professorship

The Lawrence A. Jegen III Professorship was established by Michael D. McCormick, '80. The former general counsel of Bindley Western Industries and long-time supporter of the law school funded two endowed professorships with his generous gift.

◀ Professor R. George Wright

Thomas F. Sheehan Professor of Tax Law and Policy

The Thomas F. Sheehan Professorship of Tax Law and Policy was established in 1981 by Thomas F., '68, and Joan M. Sheehan. The professorship is intended to foster important teaching and research on tax law and policy.

◀ Professor Lawrence A. Jegen III

M. Dale Palmer Professor of Law

The M. Dale Palmer Professorship was established in 1997 by the generosity of M. Dale Palmer, '61, a respected attorney and businessman.

◀ Professor Linda A. Kelly Hill

Harold R. Woodard Professor of Law

The Harold R. Woodard Professorship was established in 2004 and awarded for the first time in 2006. Clara Woodard gave the founding gift and named it in memory of her late husband, Harold R. Woodard. Mr. Woodard was a well-known intellectual property attorney and partner at the firm of Woodard, Emhardt, Moriarty, McNett & Henry. He taught for many years as an adjunct professor at the law school.

◀ Professor Nicholas L. Georgakopoulos

Samuel R. Rosen Professors of Law

The Samuel R. Rosen Professorships are named in honor of the late Judge Rosen, a respected member of Indiana's legal community. The 1933 graduate of Harvard Law School held a number of judicial posts after he moved to Indiana in 1963, including serving as deputy attorney general, an Indiana Supreme Court administrator, and the state's first senior judge accorded "at-large" judicial authority in Indiana. In 1992, Judge Rosen made a gift for the benefit of the law school to honor his Harvard classmate, Cleon H. "Bill" Foust, who served as dean of the school from 1967 until 1973. That gift supports these endowed professorships.

Scholarship and Award Recipients 2012-2013

Privately-funded scholarships and awards assist our students in lightening the heavy financial burden of law school. We would like to thank these donors for their tremendous support and for recognizing of the importance of scholarships and awards to our students. The selection criteria for these scholarships and awards vary, as some reward strong academic record and others are based on financial need. The following pages list our scholarships and awards for the 2012-2013 academic year and the respective recipients.

Barbara Abrams Scholarship

This scholarship was established in 2005 by Jeffrey, '81, Jerome, and John Abrams in memory of Barbara "Bobbie" K. Abrams. The scholarship supports one annual graduate student with both exceptional academic performance and financial need.

Kelleigh Irwin Fagan

Annual CLE Scholarship

The law school sponsors an annual Continuing Legal Education (CLE) program. The proceeds of this program are used to award scholarships to deserving students.

Misty Black

Paul R. Sadler

Roland B. Wilson III

Lloyd G. Balfour Scholarship

Funded by a bequest from Lloyd G. Balfour, this scholarship recognizes one student annually for academic achievement with a preference given to members of Phi Delta Phi Legal Fraternity.

Carrie L. Schmidt

Banta Scholarship

This scholarship was established in 1978 by a bequest from the estate of George Banta, Jr., and it is named in memory of David D. Banta, the first Dean of the law school.

Chelsea R. Hanner

Judge Betty Barteau Scholarship

This scholarship was established by Addison M. Beavers in 1997 to honor his longtime friend, the Hon. Betty Barteau, '65. Judge Barteau is a former judge of the Indiana Court of Appeals, Fifth District, and she has also served as a judicial advisor in Russia.
