Department of the Liberal Arts, - - - Butler College
Department of Medicine, - - The Medical College of Indiana
Department of Dental Surgery,
Department of Law, - - - Indiana Law School

Realizing the desirability of a union of the divers educational institutions of the city, conferences with that end in view were begun during the month of February, 1896. Representatives from Butler College, the Medical College of Indiana, the Indiana Law School and the Indiana Dental College, together with others prominent in mercantile, educational and professional circles, constituted themselves an Advisory Committee for the furtherance of the project. Public sentiment was never more unanimous regarding a public work. Pulpit and press joined in commendation; men of all creeds and nationalities assisted in the organization, and in six weeks from the date of the first meeting held the University of Indianapolis was an accomplished fact.

It is expected in the near future to purchase grounds for a centralization of buildings. Until this is done, the four existing departments will continue to occupy their present quarters. The University will open the session of 1897–1898 with about 1,200 students. The mutual aid and support that each department gives the others is a source of benefit to all. And the existing departments are but a nucleus. Departments of music, art, pharmacy, technology, engineering, pedagogy, etc., will follow as a natural sequence of what has gone before.

The University of Indianapolis will eventually become one of the great centers of learning in the central States.

Announcement.

THE Eighteenth Annual Session of the Indiana Dental College was the most successful that the institution has ever held. The College is constantly being improved in equipment and convenience for teaching, and we confidently expect our Nineteenth Annual Session to demonstrate still further the thoroughness of our methods and curriculum.

The College building is situated in the business center of the city, a little more than a block from the post-office, and convenient to all the car lines.

Indianapolis has all the advantages of the large cities, and but few of their disadvantages. It has a wide reputation as an orderly, law-abiding municipality, and is as free from vice as any city of its size in the country.

The clinics at the Indiana Dental College are ample for all. There are 180,000 people within a radius of five miles from the College, from whom the bulk of the clinical material is derived. Some clinics come to the College from adjoining counties.

The Indiana Dental College is the only dental college within a hundred miles of Indianapolis, and hence there is no competition for clinical material. The practical department is open all of the year. Students may matriculate and enter at any time.

Board and lodging may be obtained within five minutes' walk of the Collège for from $2 50 to $4.00 per week, according to the size and situation of the room and the elaborateness of the meals.

The Indianapolis Public Library and the State Library at the State House are open to students.

This College belongs to the National Association of Dental Faculties and conforms to all its rules and regulations.

The course extends over three scholastic years, viz.: first, or Freshman; second, or Junior; third, or Senior.

The Nineteenth Annual Session will begin on Tuesday, October 12, 1897, and will close April 12, 1898.

The doors of this College have ever been open to women, and some of our brightest students have been of the gentler sex.

Visiting dentists are always cordially welcomed at the College. It will be a pleasure to show all callers through the various departments.

The next catalogue of the Indiana Dental College will be issued about March 1, 1898.

A degree from this College entitles the holder to practice wherever diplomas are recognized.

For fuller information on special points of inquiry, address the College.

The diploma fee, payable not later than March 1, of the third year, is $10.00. This is returned in case the student does not graduate. The fee for the spring and summer infirmary course is $25.00 This will be credited on the tuition fee, if the student attend the succeeding winter term. A deposit of $2.50 to cover breakage, locker keys, etc., is required of each student when the College register is signed. This is returned in whole or in part at the end of the term. If all keys are surrendered to the College, and there are no bills against the student, all is returned.

When You Arrive

At the Union Station, Indianapolis, leave your trunk at the depot, take either the College avenue or Pennsylvania street car and tell the conductor to let you off at Ohio street. One block to the right, on Ohio street, will bring you to the corner of Delaware and Ohio, and to the college building.

The secretary or the treasurer will be at the College daily to matriculate students. Lists of boarding-houses will be on file at the College. Good board and lodging can be secured at the rate of $2.50 to $4.00 per week Students who club together can board for less.

University Day.

The 22d of February is known in the city as University Day. On the afternoon of that day the students of the University of Indianapolis paraded through the business portion of the city, the march terminating at Tomlinson Hall, which was appropriately decorated with the University color of royal purple, and bunting and flags. This is the hall in which the convention of National

The meeting at the hall was presided over by John Bartholomew, of the Indiana Dental College. Benjamin Harrison, ex-President of the United States, made a stirring address in honor of the occasion. The orator of the day was Bishop John Hazen White, one of the most eloquent public speakers of the age.

Democrats, and later, the Monetary Conference, met.

In the evening the students attended one of the local theaters in a body. The committeemen from the Indiana Dental College who served on the General University Committee for the celebration of February 22, 1897, were:

The Medical College of Indiana.

The 27th Annual Session of this popular institution began on September 29, 1896, with one of the largest classes in its history. The facilities for instruction have been increased and the Faculty strengthened since last session. Continued experience shows that the new building occupied exclusively by the college, on the corner of Market street and Senate avenue North, is well adapted to the requirements of advanced medical education.

The present class contains graduates from nearly every literary and normal school in the state. Students completing pre-medical courses in the various colleges are granted advanced standing according to the rules of the American Medical College Association.

Notwithstanding the establishment of a compulsory four years course and the prevailing financial stringency, the class for the present year, much to the surprise of the Faculty, reached the high standard of last session. This is regarded as very encouraging, and it is believed that with the improvement now taking place in the business of the country, the class will continue to increase at the same ratio as has been shown hitherto. The 28th session will begin on September 29, 1897.

Correspondence concerning the College solicited. Send for time card of current session showing class of instruction given in the College. For all information address the Dean, Joseph W. Marsee, 1061/2 E. New York St., Indianapolis, Ind.

Butler College, Irvington.

The purpose of this department of the University is to furnish the means of a general education in the arts and sciences. It is believed that such education not only contributes to liberal culture, but affords a preliminary training of immense practical value in professional or business life.

Butler College is well prepared to meet all demands made upon it. It has a competent faculty of instructors; it is conducted on modern methods; it is provided with thoroughly equipped laboratories, a well-selected library, a commodious reading-room, a gymnasium furnished with requisite apparatus. Its buildings, five in number, are modern in construction and well suited to the purposes for which they were designed. They are lighted by electricity and heated by steam, and occupy a campus ample in extent.

Thorough courses are offered in various lines of study adapted to the special needs of students preparing for professional or literary or scientific pursuits. Our affiliation to the University of Indianapolis enables us to offer superior opportunities to students preparing for professional schools.

The institution is co-educational, and the interests of women students are carefully considered. Irvington, the seat of the College, is a healthful and pleasant residence suburb of Indianapolis, connected with the city by electric street car line.

For information and special catalogue of the Department of Arts, University of Indianapolis, address

The Indiana Law School.

This school enters upon its fourth year with every prospect of increasing success and usefulness.

As the location for a law school the city of Indianapolis has no superior in the country. Nowhere has the student better opportunities to watch the progress of all sorts of litigation in courts of all grades. All of the courts of the state of Indiana from the Supreme Court down to that of lowest jurisdiction, and also the United States Circuit and District Courts, are in almost continuous session here during the school year. The value to the student of the knowledge of court procedure to be thus secured can hardly be placed too high. He not only learns routine court work, but he learns, also, the manner of cross-examination of witnesses: he sees the practical application of the rules governing the admission of evidence and the methods of its introduction; not only this, but the student is thus afforded opportunities to observe and study the trial methods and styles of argument of prominent lawyers from all parts of the country as they are brought here by litigation in which they are interested.

Indianapolis presents the advantages of city life without the drawbacks of a city of the largest size. The cost of living here is low, although it is the seat of great professional and commercial activity. The litigation arising in the different courts is of the most varied character, and involves the most diverse business interests, and the student may thus acquaint himself with business methods as well as court procedure.

For catalogue and further information address the Dean,

W. P. Fishback,

Indianapolis, Ind.
